Republicans Picked to Win Pivotal Maine Ballot Today

Result May Influence Rest of Campaign for Presidency.

Brann-White Race Stirs High Interest

G. O. P. Given Wide Edge in Congressional Battles in State.

Results of the Maine primary will appear in The Post tomorrow morning.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

Portland, Me., Sept. 13.—Fully aware that the eyes of the Nation are upon them, Maine voters will go to the polls tomorrow in the first real show-down of the 1936 campaign. Although the old bromide, "as Maine goes, so goes the Nation," has several times proved to be inaccurate, the result of the election tomorrow will have a profound effect upon the future of the campaign.

Tension here is high. The traditional coldness of the dwellers upon this stern and rockbound coast has disappeared. They will swarm to the polls tomorrow to roll up what is expected to be the largest vote in the history of the State. In their ears still will be ringing the challenge of Gov. Alf M. Landon, who Saturday night at what local citizens say was the biggest political meeting ever held here, called upon President Roosevelt to admit his errors and to turn back into the path of Democracy.

Interest centers upon the contest for United States Senator. Competent observers say that there is little doubt that the Republicans will win Maine's three Congressional seats and that they will elect a Governor. They feel also that the Republicans will elect a Senator, but it is generally admitted this vote will be much closer than the other contests. Various polls indicate Senator Wallace H. White, jr., Republican, has a considerable edge over Gov. Louis J. Brann, Democrat, but on the other hand, it is not hard to raise an even-money bet on Brann.

Maine is normally well up in the Republican column, and no Democrat ever got into office here without considerable Republican help. Brann twice has been elected Governor, once by a bare 2,000 votes and the second time by 23,000. He is counting on this Republican support again tomorrow.

Brann Aggressive.

Brann is an aggressive campaigner. Senator White is quieter, but he surprised even his Maine friends Saturday night by his vigorous and positive delivery in making a short speech presenting Gov. Landon.

Meanwhile, Democratic Gov. Louis J. Brann defended his four-year record last night in an impassioned attack on the Republican National Committee's "horde of imported paid orators" serving "the interest of industrial war lords who finance such political movements as the Liberty League and others." He named in the latter class "the du Ponts of Delaware, the multi-millionaire makers of munitions of war, the J. P. Morgans, of New York, London and Paris; the John D. Rockefellers, monarchs of oil fields in every part of the world, and the A. P. Sloans, of General Motors."

Brann charged that "the opposition has imported into our State campaign a varied assortment of bogus issues as foreign to Maine as the orators who gave vent to them."

Gov. Brann is not a New Dealer. He is counting much upon that fact. The New Deal is not popular in Maine. Even the Democrats here privately concede there can be no question Landon will carry the State. Brann has carefully avoided any defense of the New Deal in his campaign.

The Democrats are putting up a desperate fight. They are making the most of their carefully planned revelation that the du Ponts, the Rockefellers, and J. P. Morgan were among contributors to the Republican campaign fund here. They make no mention of the fact that the same du Ponts were heavy contributors to the Democratic fund in 1932.

The principal mouthpiece of the Democrats is the Portland Evening News. That dormant newspaper returned to life at the beginning of the campaign when Norman H. Bax-

Charge Landon Closed Schools Is Called 'Democratic Untruth'

Senator Hale Assails Rumor Kansas Budget Cuts Forced Institutions to Shut Down; Statement Looked Upon as Governor's Own Reply.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Portland, Me., Sept. 13.—The charge, made against Gov. Alf M. Landon since the beginning of the present campaign, that his budget-balancing activities have resulted in the closing of many schools in his State, was answered tonight by Senator Frederick Hale, of Maine. Hale's statement was made in reply to an assertion in a speech last night by Gov. Louis J. Brann of Maine, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate. The statement was issued by Hale after Gov. Landon had spent most of a day at his home, and, therefore, it was looked upon as Landon's own reply to the often-repeated charges.

Gov. Brann had charged in his Saturday night address that:

"Our schools in Maine have been kept open. The schools of Kansas have not been kept open."

The Hale statement said:

"The propagandists of the New Deal have chosen time and time again to ignore facts. They have even gone further. They have distorted half-truths into malicious and untrue statements. They have circulated false and misleading rumors concerning the schools of Kansas which the school people of Kansas and the good citizens of America resent.

"Gov. Brann, according to press releases of his radio address last night, has perhaps unintentionally fallen victim to these New Deal tactics when he said W. T. Markham, State superintendent of public instruction, in May, 1935, said that 6,537 boys and girls have been deprived of an education in Kansas and that 488 schools had been closed in the previous year.

"I find, on careful investigation, that the facts are these:

"A reorganization of school finances, effected in Gov. Landon's first year in office, made it possible to employ 751 additional teachers that year. Under the Rees act, passed under Gov. Landon's administration, smaller schools were combined and all remaining schools were operated more efficiently.

"In the 1935-36 school year only 3 out of 8,607 schools in the State of Kansas were closed because of financial difficulties. These three schools had a total enrollment of nine pupils. These pupils were re-enrolled in other schools and given free bus transportation.

"In 1932, the last year of Gov. Landon's predecessor's term of office, Kansas teachers received less

War Training For CCC Boys Opposed Here

Educational and Pacifist Leaders Assail Plan of Gen. Moseley.

A strong protest was registered in Washington yesterday to the proposal of Maj. Gen. Van Horn Moseley, of the Fourth Corps Army Area at Atlanta, that CCC boys be given muskets and be schooled in war.

Educational and pacifist leaders disapproved the suggestion, but it was learned that many Army officers have long discussed the idea. The latter, however, refused to be quoted directly.

Moseley's plan is outlined in the current issue of "Happy Days," official publication of the Civilian Conservation Corps. It was first made public in an Atlanta newspaper. The general has laid the plan before President Roosevelt verbally, it was learned here yesterday. No executive action has yet been taken on it.

Reaction Unfavorable.

Likening the move to Hitler's "Work Legion" which consists of unemployed Germans taught to fight, Arthur D. Call, executive secretary of the American Peace Society, yesterday said:

"My reaction is unfavorable. Military drill should be confined to the Army. I can see such a thing growing into a vast militaristic movement like Hitler's. We in America haven't reached the stage where we need large armed forces to protect ourselves from internal or external attacks as they do in dictator countries."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, was "surprised" to hear that any such move was contemplated, and said:

"This proposal is at complete variance with the announced purpose of the CCC. I believe very strongly in preparedness, but I don't want to see us converted into a nation of militarists. Such a change of policy in the CCC should not be made without the greatest deliberation and careful thought.

Educational Work.

"It seems to me that its work should be confined to educational work with the object ahead of getting jobs for the young men. Putting lads of 17 and 18 under arms brings to mind the horrible slaughter of youth in the Chaco boundary dispute in South America in which children of 14 and even younger were thrown into the trenches and killed."

An Army officer stationed here who refused to allow his name to be used, had this to say about Moseley's plan:

"I would personally like to see the CCC boys given military training. As long as they are at camps organized on a military basis, where they eat at mess together, sleep together in barracks, and march to work in formation every morning, they might as well be given rifles and put out on the range and taught to shoot.

"A good many officers have talked this thing over unofficially, in private conversations, and they believe it is a great waste of oppor-

Johnson Dies Of Pneumonia In Minnesota

Came to U.S. From Sweden in Nineties; Served in House, Senate.

By the Associated Press.

Litchfield, Minn., Sept. 13.—Magnus Johnson, Swedish immigrant to the Northwest in the 90's who became a United States Representative and Senator, died early today. He would have been 65 next Saturday.

Stricken with pneumonia August 23, Johnson was brought to a hospital here from his home in Kimball. He rallied last week until Friday, when his condition took a sudden turn for the worse.

Heart stimulants were administered and he was placed under an oxygen tent, but lapsed into unconsciousness last night and died at 3:27 a. m. (C. S. T.) Members of his family, including the widow, were at the bedside.

Genuine "Dirt" Farmer.

Magnus Johnson was probably the most thoroughgoing "dirt farmer" that ever sat in the Senate—and the loudest. His friends could boast that he was the kind of farmer who had dirt under his nails. As for his voice, it was tremendous. Electrical loud speakers were wasted on him.

It seemed impossible for him to talk in a whisper, a circumstance that often embarrassed his colleagues when they called him in and locked the doors for a caucus.

Once, at such a meeting, the chairman pleaded with him to lower his voice.

"Vall, you see," said Johnson, "in Sweden I was a glassblower. That's where I got these big lungs. I can't talk in a whisper."

Johnson was born in Sweden and spoke with a marked accent. He pronounced his "j's" and his "g's" like "y," while his "y's" became "v's." Thus, he called his friend Gov. Jake Preus "Yake." Germany was "Yermany" and voice was "woice."

That dialect didn't hurt him among the Scandinavian voters, and he didn't mind the jibes poked at him by others.

Nothing to It.

"There is nothing to this talk about me not speaking good English," he once said. "Twenty years ago I married an American girl who could not talk or understand a word of Swedish. I proposed to her in English and, by golly, she understood every word I said."

He was born in Varmland, Sweden, September 16, 1871. At the age of 12 his father died and he was apprenticed to the proprietor of a bottle factory. At the end of four years he was a full-fledged glassblower. A year later his mother died, and he decided to come to America to work as a lumberjack. First, however, he made up his mind that he would not come over penniless. So he worked for three years, saved his money and then sailed.

He worked in the lumber camps of Minnesota until he had saved enough to buy a 40-acre farm in

73 Drowned As Landslide Floods Lake

Every House Is Ruined in Norwegian Village; Victims Frozen.

20 Survive Catastrophe But Some of Them May Not Live.

By the Associated Press.

Leon, Norway, Sept. 13.—Seventy-three residents of this famous tourist area were killed today when a rock avalanche plunged into Leon Lake and sent a wall of water sweeping over the town.

The slide from the 6,000-foot Rogne Mountain with its resultant flood left little but death and destruction to greet would-be rescuers who reached this picturesque village.

They rushed to the town, awakened by a roar like that of artillery fire.

The catastrophe, at 5:30 a. m., left not a single house standing. Even the fields were scoured clear of soil, leaving bare rocks to show where the waters had rushed and then subsided.

Others May Die.

Rescuers found about 20 survivors but many of them were severely injured and some were expected to die.

One woman, who had arisen early to milk her goats pastured in a high field, saw the flood envelop her home and drown every member of her family, she said.

A farmer who had worked late in the field slept in a small field-house and was carried 1,200 feet by the flood, but survived.

"My wife, four children, my father and mother all are gone," he said dazedly.

"My house, which was one of a group of nine, has been swept away so entirely that I cannot find where it stood."

A battered steamboat, which, since the catastrophe of 1905 in which 60 were killed, had perched 350 feet from the water, was carried another 300 feet up the mountainside.

Several of the victims were carried hundreds of yards from the village. Apparently they had frozen to death.

Not a single family escaped at least one death.

Tourists from every part of the world who have visited the scene of the catastrophe always marveled at the temerity of the inhabitants, living under the constant threat of death.

Avalanches, minor ones except for that of 1905 and today, are not uncommon here.

Loen Lake is a narrow 2-mile body of water, flanked by 1,000-foot rock cliffs so steep they appear actually to hang over the lake.

One Community Remains.

The settlement of Bodal, straight across the precipice from which the mass of rock hurtled down today, is the only community in the region still standing.

Fourteen families at Nesdal, ¾-mile away, were awakened by the roar of the avalanches and fled their homes. They were overtaken by the water and only one survived.

Leon, which had a population of 120, was directly in the path of the wall of water.

The flood wave was so immense that one house standing on a high ridge, 2 miles up from Rogne Mountain, was demolished and its inhabitants killed.

6 Die When Train Crashes Into Auto At Road Crossing

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 13.—A train-automobile crash at a little-used road crossing near Inkster, Mich., brought death today to six persons.

The dead: John W. Talanshar, 39, Ecorse, Mich.; Mrs. Irene T. Talanshar, 39, his wife; Mrs. Anna Talanshar, mother of John; Mrs. Mary Jantoshik, 35, sister of Talanshar; Dorothy Talanshar, 12; Joseph Jantoshik, 5.

County officers who went to the scene said they learned the group was on the way to Eloise Hospital, near Inkster, to visit Mrs. Jantoshik's husband, a patient there.

The car was traveling on a lane which had been blocked off for use of construction crews working on an overpass at Ecorse and Telegraph roads, the officers said. Talanshar apparently had taken it to avoid heavy Sunday traffic on a detour near the project.

Ralph Rust, engineer of the Wabash passenger train which struck the car, said he was running on full schedule as he neared the crossing and was not able to check the train when the car appeared on the track.

Germany Ready for War to Stop Communism's Rise, Hitler Says; Czechs' Land Held Reich Goal

Russia Charges Fuehrer Plans Drive to Clear Road to Moscow.

Invasion Allegedly Charted in Detail

Hungary to Share Area Subjugated, Official Paper Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Sept. 13.—Czechoslovakia, the authoritative Communist newspaper, Pravda, charged today, will be the next goal of Germany's army.

Ignoring the attack upon bolshevism by Chancellor Adolf Hitler in speeches at Nurnberg, Pravda outlined what it asserted were the Nazi dictator's immediate plans—allegedly the subjugation and partition of Czechoslovakia in order to open a road toward the Soviet Union.

"Czechoslovakia, because of her geographical position, figures next in Hitler's plans," the newspaper charges. "The Germans plan to liquidate the barrier that lies in their way to southeastern Europe in order to clear the road for a drive against the Soviet Union."

The newspaper declared the campaign was designed to weaken Czechoslovakia internally and that it already was under way in conjunction with Hungary, with whom it was charged the Nazis plan to share the territory if they can obtain it.

Plans Described.

"Nazis are at work through the information bureau Gestlo, trying to drive a wedge between the Czechs and Poland and at the same time working German minorities in Czechoslovakia where they are forming semimilitary organizations expected to do their part when aggression starts.

"Simultaneously the Germans are pushing great military highways, railways and air plans for subjugation of Czechoslovakia. Even now in peace times there are three German army corps, three motorized divisions flanking three sides of western Czechoslovakia.

"A third of the military highways Hitler is building are aimed at a thrust into Czechoslovakia."

"At the same time Germans are storing vast munitions and military equipment underground along the frontiers of Czechospovakia," the Communist newspaper continued.

"Everything, even the pettiest detail has been thought of.

"The German general staff plan calls for:

"1. Hungary will act in union with Germany.

"2. Germany counts on support of millions of Germans on the northern frontier.

"3. Southern Czechoslovakia will go to Hungary in return for support of the 3,600,000 Hungarian minority there.

"Plans have been worked out for war similar to that which the Germans waged against Austria in 1866."

To Bolster Defenses.

Meanwhile, Russia was reported reliably to be considering strengthening her already impressive western frontier defenses.

But the Reichsfuehrer's speech at Nurnberg, expressing prediction of

Richman, Merrill Out Over Atlantic In Return Flight

Southport, England, (Monday), Sept. 14 (AP).—Harry Richman and Dick Merrill hopped off at 3:03 a. m. today (9:03 p. m. Eastern standard time yesterday) on their return flight to the United States.

Richman, the Broadway crooner, and Merrill, his pilot, were attempting to be the first to make a round-trip transatlantic flight.

They landed in a South Wales pasture September 3 after flying from New York in 18 hours 38 minutes.

Merrill had taken some rest while their low-winged monoplane, the Lady Peace, was being prepared for the hop. Richman remained up while the plane's gasoline tanks were being filled.

The take-off for the second attempted Atlantic crossing of the silver-blue and gold craft was almost perfect.

Tens of thousands of Englishmen cheered the two American fliers as the Lady Peace taxied down the 2½-mile runway, lighted by flares, and then disappeared into the darkness.

Merrill and Richman arrived at the flying field at 2:30 a. m., after sleeping at a hotel at which they breakfasted. They came from Liverpool yesterday to make use of the long, smooth beach here for their start in the heavily-laden machine.

Both obviously were nervous as they arrived. Richman shouted occasionally, but Merrill wore a grim smile and attempted to remain calm in the face of their hazardous venture.

The east-west crossing of the Atlantic is generally considered more difficult than the hop they made to bring them to the British Isles.

They Are Ready for War in Europe

STALIN. HITLER. MUSSOLINI.

Germany is ready for war at any hour, Adolf Hitler told the Nazi party congress at Nurnberg, warning that his nation cannot remain indifferent to progressive bolshevization of Europe.

The official Soviet press charged that Germany's next militaristic step would be an attempt to take Czechoslovakia and pave the way for invasion of the Soviet Union.

Italian Fascist newspapers were virtually unanimous in stating editorially that the European situation had reached such a delicate state that war is likely.

France served notice on Germany that under no circumstances would she abandon the Franco-Soviet military pact or any other military alliance.

The Pope, in an address today to Spanish refugees, was expected to bitterly attack the "growing menace of communism" and to suggest positive methods for combatting it.

In Spain, foreign diplomats acted to save women and children besieged with rebel defenders in the Alcazar Castle.

Hitler Girds for War—An Editorial—Page 8.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Nurnberg, Sept. 13.—Germany is well armed and ready to defend a miracle—"the miracle of its own resurrection"—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler told 120,000 uniformed Nazis and 50,000 spectators in a ceremonial tribute to World War dead today.

"Let no one be deceived!" he shouted.

"We are ready at any hour."

The distant tolling of church bells emphasized the Fuehrer's words as, speaking in the huge Luitpold Grove, he dismissed with a phrase the material achievements of Nazi rule—expensive road building and claimed reduction in unemployment.

"Your miracle, however, was resurrection of a humiliated people," Hitler said.

"That miracle consisted not in the fact that one man arose (Hitler) who believed in the resurrection but that millions followed him and went the same way.

"That I found you, that you here with me all these years—that was Germany's great good fortune."

Stresses Troop Strength.

Emphasizing that the 120,000 uniformed men before him were only an extremely small percentage of his 2,500,000 storm troopers, his 235,000 black uniformed "S. S." men, not to mention the nation's armament equipment, Hitler asked:

"Who can oppose this bloc of national determination?

"Our old enemy, bolshevism, is vanquished within Germany, but still active around her borders.

"But let no one be deceived. We are ready at any hour. We all have one wish—to maintain peace—but with it goes one firm decision: Never to surrender Germany to that enemy we have come to know so well."

Referring to Spain he said:

"Everywhere agitators are calling masses together in demonstrations against fascism and against national socialism— demonstrations for supplying arms and ammunition and volunteers.

"But if I should call a demonstration it would amaze the world. Millions upon millions would respond with flaming hearts."

Germany cannot remain indifferent to progressive bolshevization of Europe, Hitler said in an interview after the triumphal procession through Nurnberg streets lined with thousands of cheering Germans.

The subject turned to anti-Fascist and anti-Nazi demonstrations which he had mentioned briefly in his morning speech at Luitpold Grove.

He was asked to explain further the details of what he meant by possible counter-demonstrations in Germany.

"Demonstrations, even public collections for purchase of arms and ammunitions for the bolshevists of Spain are being tolerated by other governments," he replied.

"We have not permitted such collections on behalf of nationalists. Yet some people call this Nurnberg (Nazi Party) convention 'Nazi mobilization.'"

"If we were to follow our inclination and authorize, for instance, public demonstrations of sympathy for the nationalists of Spain, I would have only to give the word and like that"—he snapped his fingers—"15,000,000 Germans would leap to my call.

"Then you would see demonstrations such as the world has never witnessed—a demonstration that would give even Moscow something unpleasant to think about.

Recalls Red "Terrorism."

"People wonder why we are such fanatics against bolshevism. It is because we—Italy too—have lived through just the sort of things that are happening in Spain.

"Why right here in Nurnberg in 1923 . . . down there." He pointed toward one of the winding streets. "Forty-five hundred marching

European War Likely, Papers In Italy Assert

Nation Must Be Prepared for 'Explosion,' Inspired Writers Warn.

By the United Press.

Rome, Sept. 13.—Fascist newspapers virtually were unanimous in stating editorially today that the European situation has reached such a delicate state that war is likely.

Some newspapers were more direct than others, but the general trend of editorial comment on Saturday's Cabinet decisions left no doubt regarding the extent of the government's apprehensions.

It was believed the majority of today's editorials were government-inspired. It now is clear that Italy has decided to set the pace in the European armament race, because she feels that what at any other time would be considered an insignificant "incident" now might explode the European powder barrel.

The Popolo Di Roma said:

"The extraordinary appropriations (for armament, army and navy, voted Saturday) are the logical consequences of the aggravated situation of European politics, whose gordian knots ever are more numerous with no one knowing if it will be possible to unite them peacefully or if it will be necessary for us to bare the sword and cut them for our own benefit . . . At the present time there is chaos of events and spirits, of powder boxes exploding and powder boxes which are not waiting for anything better than to explode.

"Must Be Prepared."

"Italy today is perhaps the European power which most sincerely is doing most to extinguish the fires and clarify the poisoned atmosphere to avoid the inhuman catastrophe which is threatening the world . . . Italy, however, must take her precautions—namely, perfect her armaments—for the two-fold purpose of enhancing the authority of her voice and to be prepared to face all complications

Alcazar Rebels Flout Diplomat Proffering Aid

Single Shot Only Reply to Offer to Remove Women, Children.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Toledo, Sept. 13.—Besieged rebels within the ancient Alcazar tonight answered with a single shot the offer of neutral diplomats to evacuate women and children from the apparently doomed fortress.

Ambassador Aurellio Nunez Morgado, of Chile, acting after Madrid's diplomatic corps had offered to mediate between the government and rebel commanders in the battered fortress, sped to Toledo from the capital and sought rebel agreement to the plan.

A loud speaker was set up outside the fortress, where for eight weeks 1,700 rebels, including 600 women and children, have held out as loyalist guns slowly pounded the Alcazar to pieces. Through the loud speaker a loyalist officer called to those in the fortress:

"Attention Alcazar. The Chilean Ambassador wishes to speak to you. Meanwhile we have suspended hostilities. If you agree to this request, signal with a white flag."

Single Shot Fired.

Four times this call was repeated. Then from the silent and seemingly uninhabited fortress came a single shot.

When darkness came the white flag had not appeared and loyalist artillery resumed bombardment of the Alcazar.

Morgado, returning to Madrid tonight, said he would try again tomorrow to put his plan into effect.

If he succeeds in entering the fort tomorrow he will offer the rebels the following proposal:

All 600 of the women and children will be removed under the protection of the Chilean flag.

Since Morgado is dean of the diplomatic corps and acting in its name, the flag actually will represent the flags of all nations still rep-

Jury's Resentment of 'Hill-Billy' News Stories In Maxwell Case Believed Factor in Verdict

By Edward T. Folliard.
A Staff Correspondent.

Jonesville, Va., Sept. 13.—What is known in the newspaper craft as "color" has had a profound effect on the case of Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old mountain school teacher, sentenced to 25 years in prison last November for the "slipper murder" of Trigg Maxwell, her father.

Some persons here, among them Virgil Wacks, believe this newspaper "color" has much to do with the severe punishment meted out to the girl.

Wacks, a rural newspaper correspondent, has followed the Maxwell case since that July night in 1935 when Edith Maxwell, arriving late at her home in The Pound, encountered a drunken and angry father, and in a tussle that followed, struck him with her slipper. Maxwell died an hour later.

"The reporters from the cities came down around the time of the trial," Wacks said today. "They wrote about the 'backwoods trial' and the 'hill-billy' jury. One of them wrote about the people of Wise County 'coming down from their cabins in the hills in their store-bought clothes' to see Edith Maxwell go on trial for killing her 'pappy.' He said the cows had to be chased out of the streets.

"Then there were stories about Edith violating the 'curfew law' and about the 'code of the mountains.'

"Now that kind of stuff may have been all right in John Fox's 'Trail of the Lonesome Pine,' but the time he was writing about was long ago. Good schools, the automobile and the radio have come here since then, and so has wealth from coal. That curfew and code of the mountains stuff doesn't exist. Oh, there are fathers down here who don't want their daughters to stay out late at night, but they aren't any different from fathers in the city."

The effect of the "color" stories, Wacks said, was to enfuriate many of the people of Wise, where Edith was tried. And undoubtedly, he added, they stirred up an animosity

Police Meet Train in Atlanta, So Browder Shuns Talk, Leaves

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Sept. 13.—A police detail met the train which brought Earl Browder, Communist candidate for President, to Atlanta last night, but they had no occasion to carry out orders to arrest him for any "communistic utterances."

Browder, who caught another train an hour and 20 minutes later for Tampa, Fla., said today no speech had been scheduled for Atlanta. He also said he did not see any police during his stopover.

Chief of Police T. O. Sturdivant said he sent four plainsclothesmen to the terminal station on the strength of published reports that Browder would speak here.

"We don't like that stuff in Atlanta," said Chief Studivant.

Chains Block Talk.

Tampa, Fla., Sept. 13 (AP).—Earl Browder, Communist party candidate for President, protested to President Roosevelt today when a padlocked and chained meeting hall door forced cancellation of his scheduled speech here.

Browder said in a telegram to Mr. Roosevelt he was "illegally and forcefully prevented" from speaking "by lawless elements who seized hall from its custodians and barred doors despite a legal contract."

2d Auto Accident Laid to Ickes' Son

Boston, Sept. 13 (AP).—Police disclosed tonight that Robert H. Ickes, 21, foster son of Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, was involved in his second automobile mishap within a month last night and that five passengers in the second machine claimed injuries.

Only last August 25 young Ickes was acquitted in Winchester on a drunken driving charge.

Ickes' latest motor vehicle mishap, said to have occurred at a street intersection in Boston's south end, was revealed when John F. Kerins, 21, of Roxbury, driver of the second car, filed a report of the accident, according to police.

No action was taken against either young Ickes or Kerins, pending investigation.

New Deal Plots Self-Rule's End, League Asserts

Attempt to Destroy Autonomy Laid to Roosevelt by Liberty Group.

The New Deal is attempting to "destroy local self-government," the American Liberty League charged last night in its pamphlet release, in sharp conflict with the statement by President Roosevelt last week at Charlotte, N. C., that "in the process of attaining these ends, individual liberties have not been removed, and inherent rights of the States have not been invaded."

At the same time the Committee of Utility Executives, through Chairman Philip H. Gadsden, denounced the pledge President Roosevelt made, in a speech Friday, to put through additional Government power projects if cheaper power is not made widely available soon.

The utility group attacked this assertion as a "clear-cut admission of New Deal guilt in the abuse of constitutional functions for the purpose of achieving unconstitutional objectives."

Destruction Attempt Charged.

The Liberty League release was subtitled:

"A study of the Roosevelt Administration's persistent attempt to destroy local self-government in the United States and substitute therefor a centralized all-powerful Federal authority similar to current dictatorships in several European countries."

The 22-page analysis consisted of a list of New Deal legislation which the League writers hold to be subversive to local self-government in the Nation, and included illustrations of what might happen "if the present Administration is granted a new lease on power" by comments on the remarks of several Administration chiefs.

The League statement pictured the Supreme Court as the bulwark against which supposed New Deal attempts to encroach upon the rights of the States had failed.

Quotes Wallace Statement.

The League placed particular emphasis in a sentence abstracted from a book-preface by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace. In a foreword to Irving Brant's book, "Storm Over The Constitution," Secretary Wallace said:

"The important thing . . . is to elect Presidents who will nominate the right men to the Supreme Court."

The League assumed that this sentence reflected the views of the President, and went on to picture this phase of the New Deal as "part of a three-fold attack upon the fundamental features of the American system of government," the other two being "delegation of broad legislative power to the executive branch of the Government," and "greater control over the lives and business activities of the people by infringement upon individual rights guaranteed in the Constitution."

Gadsden Flings Charges.

The statement by Gadsden was vehement in denunciation of the implication in President Roosevelt's address to the Third World Power Conference that reductions of electric power rates might be forced by the competitive influence of more Federal dam projects. Gadsden said:

"From the lips of the President of the United States at last we have an open and official declaration that the real purpose of this hydro-electric program of the Government is not flood control, not navigation, not conservation—that the real purpose is to force further reduction of electric power rates."

In his speech, the President's actual words were:

"Primarily those reservoirs were created for navigation or reclamation, but with incidental values for flood control and the regulation of stream flow. Among other incidentals is the generation of electric power, and this may prove to be the force that breaks the vicious circle to which I have referred. If these are not sufficient the influence of additional meritorious projects awaiting development can always be added."

"Failed to Explain."

Gadsden added:

"It is significant that the President, while making his first campaign defense of his yardstick theory, failed to answer or explain the substantiated charge that electricity sold from these wasteful and unnecessary projects costs the people much more than the same energy if sold by the private utilities, an ostensible saving by way of lower rates being made up two fold from taxes levied on everybody.

"He has served notice upon the millions of citizens whose savings are invested in operating utility companies that unless rates are adjusted to suit the arbitrary views of Washington bureaucrats, then the properties in which they have invested their savings are going to be subjected to further destructive and unconstitutional Federal competition.

1,500,000,000-Yr. Old Life Forms Unearthed

Ironmountain, Mich., Sept. 13 (AP).—WPA dynamiters at a municipal quarry here were credited today by Oscar H. Reinholt, geologist and mining engineer, with having unearthed evidence of life forms that existed 1,500,000,000 years ago.

"If this doesn't outrank all the geological discoveries of history, it is at least as important as the appearance of the dinosauri in Mongolia, the toothed bird archeoptery in Bavaria, or the Rancho la Brea camels, lions and saber-toothed tigers near Los Angeles," Reinholt said.

Straw Votes on Presidential Forecast Show Varying Results in 3 Polls.

By Franklyn Waltman

AS THIS year's Presidential campaign progresses one of its most fascinating aspects will be keeping track of the various straw votes being conducted the country over in an effort to prognosticate the result. The accuracy of such efforts to gauge the public mind will not be known until the votes on November 3 are counted. Nevertheless a comparison of the recordings of the various weather vanes is not only interesting, but enlightening.

WALTMAN.

It is too early to make apt comparisons between the various polls on a national basis. Of three of these Nation-wide straw votes, only one, that of Dr. George Gallup's Institute of Public Opinion, pretends to be conclusive. The Literary Digest to date has reported results from 99,734 voters in nine States—and admittedly the returns from those States are scattered. A third poll, conducted by the Publishers Autocaster Service in co-operation with rural newspapers—and only including voters in rural areas—has gathered 359,280 votes from 35 States.

The results of these three polls taken on their face reveal that the wind is blowing in distinctly different directions—and with some velocity at that. The only plausible explanation seems to be that at this stage of the campaign these polls have taken their readings of the wind from different places or by different methods.

In percentages the latest aggregate findings of these three polls show the preference of voters to be as follows:

	Landon	Roosevelt	Others
Gallup	44.3	49.3	6.4
Autocaster.	60.99	32.55	6.46
Digest	61.35	33.55	5.1

Obviously all of these polls cannot be right. But it should be kept in mind that the only poll at this time which claims to have made a complete sampling of the electorate is the Gallup, which shows President Roosevelt in the lead in 28 States with 275 electoral votes.

Of the nine States covered so far by the Digest poll, it and the Gallup poll agree in placing six of those States in the Republican column. They are Indiana, Maine, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. In virtually each case, however, the Digest shows a stronger Republican trend than the Gallup poll.

These two polls also agree in placing Oklahoma and Texas in the Roosevelt column. They differ only on the ninth State—Ohio. The Gallup poll places Ohio in the Roosevelt column with a 51 per cent Democratic vote. The Digest places it in the Landon column, giving him 60 per cent of the major party votes returned.

The Autocaster poll places all of the Digest's nine States in the Republican column, except Texas, which falls to the President, and Oklahoma, on which no report is made. Thus, aside from specific percentages, it disagrees from the Gallup poll only as to Ohio, the same difference existing between the Gallup and Digest polls. The Autocaster poll, however, shows in the case of individual States an even greater Republican trend than does the Digest—but it does not include any voters of large cities, where Democratic strength seems to be greater.

Something of a test of these polls can be made as a result of the State election in Maine. In that State four polls have been taken, one under the auspices of the Republican leaders in that State, in addition to the three already mentioned.

As between President Roosevelt and Gov. Landon these polls indicate the following division of sentiment in Maine:

	Landon	Roosevelt
Gallup	67	33
Autocaster	95	5
Digest	68.8	31.2
Republican	69	31

Except for the Autocaster result, the polls are in approximate agreement on Maine. There the Digest received returns from 7,212 voters. The Republicans sent out 280,000 ballots and approximately 80,000 of these were returned. The Autocaster result was based on 2,014 ballots returned. The Gallup figures were computed from scientific sampling made in the State by the Institute of Public Opinion.

Now, Maine voters as a group do not divide in the national election exactly as they do in the State election. This was illustrated four years ago when Gov. Louis J. Brann, Democrat, carried the State by a slight majority, while Herbert Hoover, Republican, two months later, carried the State by a comparatively large plurality.

But a key to a comparison of these poll returns with the results in the State election to test their accuracy is afforded by the fact that the Republican poll also canvassed sentiment as to Governor and Senator, the offices at stake in the Maine State election. This poll showed that approximately 71.2 per cent of the voters canvassed favored the Republican candidate for Governor, Lewis O. Barrows, making him a slightly stronger candidate than Gov. Landon. On the other hand, it showed Senator Wallace H. White, Republican, had the support of 65.2 per cent of the voters polled, making him a weaker candidate than Gov. Landon.

Thus a comparison of the actual vote cast in Maine for Governor and Senator with the Republican poll percentages should show the margin of error in the latter—and since it closely approximates the Gallup and Digest polls, the margin of error liable in those surveys also.

Results of straw votes in Maryland afford another opportunity of checking the accuracy of the national polls. There, in addition to the Gallup and Autocaster polls—and later on the Digest—the Baltimore Sun is conducting a canvass of every registered voter in the State. This poll is still in its early stage and the fact that it has shown during the first week daily fluctuations of 1 per cent and more indicates that the returns so far should not be taken as showing a conclusive trend.

The straw votes results, stated in percentages, in Maryland between President Roosevelt and Gov. Landon are as follows:

	Landon.	Roosevelt.
Gallup	45	55
Sun	40.7	59.3
Autocaster	74.5	25.5.

As between the Sun and the Autocaster results a more comparable basis would be the Sun's returns from the counties of the State, leaving out Baltimore, where Mr. Roosevelt appears stronger. The Sun, on the basis of 19,303 ballots from the counties, shows President Roosevelt to have the support of 55 per cent of the voters. In another week or two the Sun poll will be a better barometer of what may happen in Maryland.

Michigan Fight Centers Interest In 5 Primaries

Tomorrow's Votes to Clear Decks for Presidential Campaign to Nov. 3.

By the United Press.

Maine's State election today and five State primaries Tuesday will clear decks this week for seven weeks' uninterrupted attention to the Presidential campaign.

The States holding primaries tomorrow are Michigan, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York and Wisconsin, the last of 42 in which the primary date is fixed by law.

Gov. Alf M. Landon's emphasis at the beginning of his speech at Portland last night on the old adage: "As Maine goes, so goes the Nation," gave Republicans their cue for prophecies of national victory in the event of Republican success tomorrow. The political maxim has been right every Presidential year since 1900 except in the years of Woodrow Wilson's election.

Five offices are at stake in the State election. The balloting on Presidential electors will not be held until November 3, with the rest of the Nation.

Michigan Fight Hot.

Of the State primaries the following day, Michigan's is the most significant. Each party has witnessed fighting between factions. Because the State is listed as doubtful, President Roosevelt reportedly invited Frank Murphy, high commissioner to the Philippines, to run for Governor and gave him a leave of absence to do it. Murphy was chosen as the Democrat most able to combat the anti-New Deal efforts of Father Charles E. Coughlin.

In Republican ranks, Senator James Couzens' announcement supporting Mr. Roosevelt for re-election aroused resentment and intensified the opposition of former Gov. Wilber M. Brucker, who seeks to oust him. A feature of the primary is that voters who desire to cast a ballot in the Democratic primary for Murphy will be unable to vote also for Couzens, whose name appears only on the Republican ballot.

Two other interesting fights are the Senate contests in New Hampshire and Massachusetts. In the former State, former Senator George H. Moses, who was one of the leading supporters of Frank Knox in the pre-Republican convention campaign, is seeking a comeback against Gov. H. Styles Bridges for the Republican nomination.

Two Seek Coolidge Seat.

In Massachusetts the senatorial fight is Democratic. Mayor Robert E. Greenwood, of Fitchburg, is opposing Gov. James M. Curley for the seat now held by Greenwood's father-in-law, Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, who is not a candidate.

In Washington, meanwhile, the Republican National Committee continued its arguments against the Administration.

A Republican statement charged the Administration with "loading WPA relief rolls on the eve of the forthcoming national election in an attempt to influence votes."

The G. O. P. statement recalled Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' announced policy that relief rolls were to be reduced with improved business conditions, and added that the most recent WPA report "shows that the practice has been just to the contrary."

It pointed out that 3,269,000 were on relief February 28, while the report for July 31 showed 3,297,000 on the rolls.

Heir, 21, Held After Death of Woman, 78

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 13.—The friendship of a 21-year-old former secretary with his wealthy employer, 78-year-old Mrs. Anna Powell Crookshank, was under investigation today as police homicide detectives awaited an autopsy surgeon's report on the cause of her death last Wednesday.

Thaddeus Pickens, the young man named as major beneficiary in the elderly woman's will, was held as a material witness pending the autopsy surgeon's examination, described by officers as a routine procedure to avoid possible later controversy among her heirs as to the cause of death. Mrs. Crookshank's death certificate cited pneumonia.

The investigation, said Capt. Blane Steed, is the result of an anonymous telephone call hinting at the possibility of foul play. David Crookshank, 85, retired rancher and widower of the woman, also demanded an investigation.

Pickens, answering questions readily, told detectives how the wealthy woman's friendship had brought him cash and luxuries over a period of several months, Detective Lieut. Miles Ledbetter asserted.

Roosevelt Lands After River Cruise

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt returned to the White House last night after a 28-hour river cruise on the U. S. S. Potomac.

Several hundred persons in Southeast Washington waved to him as he drove by after his yacht docked at the Navy Yard shortly before 6 o'clock.

A motorcycle officer in the escort skidded and fell as he tried to clear the way for the party. He was shaken up.

The President and his small party, including Attorney General Cummings and Secretary Ickes, tried fishing late yesterday south of Quantico, Va., but there was little boasting about the catch.

Mr. Roosevelt will remain here until Thursday, when he leaves for Cambridge, Mass., to deliver an address the next day at the Harvard University tercentenary celebration.

From there he will go to his mother's estate at Hyde Park, N. Y., to remain until his next speaking engagement, September 29, before the New York State Democratic convention at Syracuse. His plans call for his return to Washington September 30 to work on arrangements for his campaign swing.

War Training For CCC Boys Opposed Here

Educational and Pacifist Leaders Assail Plan of Gen. Moseley.

tunity not to teach these kids how to fight. I don't advocate concentrated military training, but the elements of handling a pistol, shooting a rifle, drill, and so forth, should be instilled in the lads.

"Their daily schedule could include drill and once a week or so they should be put on the ranges. They should also be put on Army rations at regular intervals and put out in the open, where they will learn how to cook for themselves as they will have to in war time."

Army Has No Comment.

Col. Alexander Surles, of the Army press relations department, stated that the War Department knows nothing officially about Moseley's plan, although the department had been informed that Moseley has had conversation on the subject with President Roosevelt. Officially, he declared, the Army has no comment to make.

Gen. Moseley's plan provides for alternate days of conservation work and military drill. It is much more drastic in scope than local officers.

"The benefits accruing to America through the fine work of the CCC are great," he said, "but what an opportunity is ours if we will but modify the law and pass every lad, without exception, through one of these camps for a period of six months.

"Over a million lads throughout the United States reach the age of 17 or 18 each year. They form the crop from which we develop the manpower of the Nation. Two six months courses would enable us to handle them all in any one year."

Although his printed article does not recommend it specifically, he leaves the way open for universal conscription of young America in his plan.

Two Suspects Seized In Extortion Threats

Akron, Sept. 13 (AP).—Prosecutor Herman E. Werner summoned handwriting experts tonight to examine the writing of a man and woman taken into custody as suspects in the delivery of a series of mysterious threats and warnings to public officials and others. The suspects' identity was kept secret by police.

In the midst of the ominous threats, a woman threw acid into the face of Mrs. Madelyn Messner, 25, wife of a 74-year-old evangelist, Friday evening. Mrs. Messner was one of those threatened. Werner, Judge Donavan D. Isham and Mrs. Messner's attorney, Howard Weaver, also received threatening messages.

Reds, Fascism On Rise in U. S., V. F. W. Is Told

Teachers' Oaths, Stronger National Defense Are Urged at Parley.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Sept. 13.—Veterans of Foreign Wars, gathering by thousands for their annual encampment, heard charges today that communism and fascism are growing menaces in the United States.

Preconvention discussions also drew assertions of a need for teachers' oaths and stronger national defenses.

Victor E. Devereaux, national director of Americanism for the V. F. W., disclosed that 5,000 units of the organization constantly report communistic activities.

"We are fighting communism, fascism and atheism," said Devereaux.

"The interior of the United States is not as badly infested with Communists and similar radicals as the coastal regions, with the exception of large cities such as Chicago."

Charges School "Boring."

Speaking of the Americanism department's program of education for youth, Devereaux said "the Reds have their own youth program and are boring into the schools and colleges."

"Teachers," he added, "are molding the idea of the America of tomorrow. Theirs is a patriotic responsibility. The V. F. W. is urging teachers' oath laws to prevent communistic ideas from seeping into our educational system."

Admiral Richmond P. Hobson, retired, who led the volunteers who bottled up the Spanish fleet in Santiago Harbor in the Spanish-American War, also spoke.

Urges Navy Increase.

"The best peace insurance the world could have would be for the United States to double the size of its Navy, increase its air forces and quickly gain and permanently maintain control of the air and sea in the Northern Hemisphere at least from the Middle Atlantic to the Middle Pacific," he said.

Predicting "the next big war likely will be a conflict between the two forms of autocracy—fascism and communism," Admiral Hobson said:

"The world will give heed to the voice of America speaking for peace only if we have the armaments to command respect."

Business sessions of the encampment open tomorrow.

Farm Trading Act Expansion Today

By the Associated Press.

Federal regulation of trading in chief farm products was expanded and tightened yesterday as provisions of the commodity act of 1936 went into effect, replacing the grain futures act of 1922.

Officials said both acts prohibited "price manipulation" or "corners" on products. While the old act was limited to grains—wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed and grain sorghums—the new act also includes cotton, rice, butter and eggs, mill feeds and Irish potatoes.

Both acts rest upon the powers of Congress to regulate interstate commerce. Constitutionality of the grain futures act was upheld by the Supreme Court in 1923. Three tests actions against the new act were started in Federal Courts at Chicago and Kansas City, and injunctions against enforcement were denied.

Son of Rogers Rescued With 2 In Boat Crash

Oil Family Scion Hurled Into East River in Collision With Barge.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 13.—Henry Huddleston Rogers, son of the late oil millionaire, H. H. Rogers, and two young women companions were rescued from the East River tonight after the motor in Rogers' 12-foot cabin speedboat, went dead near Welfare Island and the craft collided with an oil barge.

Rogers, catapaulted from the boat, by the shock, swam back and helped the women to keep the boat afloat until two life guards arrived from an East River station.

The life gurads put out to the sinking launch in a dory and towed it to Welfare Island, where the occupants of the Rogers boat transferred to the dory and were put ashore.

Three Drown in Upset.

Shreveport, La., Sept. 13 (AP).—Three persons were drowned and a fourth was taken from the water apparently lifeless late today when a motor boat carrying two men and nine children on a pleasure cruise capsized in Cross Lake, source of Shreveport's water supply.

The boat was caught in a strong wind and upset by high waves about 250 yards from shore, witnesses said.

Man Believed Drowned.

Detroit, Sept. 13 (AP).—Emerson Green, 24, of Pasadena, Calif., was believed drowned in Lake St. Clair today as he swam for aid after a rowboat in which he and Miss Mary Louise Viger, 19, of Detroit, had gone for a ride, capsized.

Miss Viger was rescued by occupants of a sailboat after she had clung to the overturned boat for several hours.

France to Keep Soviet Treaty, Germany Told

Will Oppose Attempt at Anti-Russian Pact at Locarno Parley.

By the United Press.

Bergerac, France, Sept. 13.—France today served notice on Germany that under no circumstances would she abandon the Franco-Soviet military pact or any other defensive alliance.

Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos, addressing the Bergerac County Fair, plainly told German Fuehrer Adolf Hitler that France would oppose any attempt to turn the forthcoming five-power Locarno Conference into an anti-Soviet holy alliance.

Hitting at the inflammatory speeches delivered before the Nazi "congress of honor" at Nurnberg during the past week, Delbos said:

"It is not from us that arise appeals to arms and exhortation to ideological crusades which would subject Europe to fire and blood. We are not interfering in the international affairs of other countries. We shall not permit anyone to interfere in ours."

Further Attacks Feared.

The French press, meanwhile, anxiously awaited the speech Hitler will make to the Nazis assembled at Nurnberg tomorrow. They feared his fiery remarks Saturday and on preceding days indicated the possibility of a more violent attack on Russia tomorrow, preluding refusal by Germany to attend the Locarno Conference, called to meet in London next month, unless France abandoned her alliance with Russia.

French correspondents, reporting Hitler's Saturday speech, thought he intended to convey definite hints that Germany desired to expand into Russian territory.

Paris newspapers were quick to comment on the tone of Hitler's speeches.

"Hitler pronounces continually more violent anti-Bolshevik speeches," Le Matin said.

Other newspapers commented on the "threatening" tone of the German Fuehrer's remarks.

To Check Arms Race.

Bergerac, France, Sept. 13 (AP).—France plans to take quick action to check the headlong armament race threatening Europe with "total ruin," Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos revealed today.

He indicated the move would be made before the League of Nations session in Geneva late this month, based on strengthening the League, to which he said "France remains faithful."

French official circles regard French security endangered by Chancellor Adolf Hitler's recent action in lengthening the term of compulsory military service in Germany from one to two years, and the announcement by Premier Benito Mussolini that Italian armed strength could reach 8,000,000 men at a moment's notice.

These moves were followed by Hitler's expressed wish that Germany had the rich Russian Ukraine agricultural lands, and by an Italian announcement of extraordinary appropriations for new armaments.

Within the past few days France also set aside new appropriations for improvement of her army, chiefly on the basis of quality rather than increased size.

European War Likely, Papers In Italy Declare which might endanger the tranquillity of the nation and the empire."

Referring significantly to the government's plan to develop economic autonomy, the Voce di Italia (Sunday edition of Giornal d'Italia) said:

"Our autonomy regarding raw materials represents a playing card less in the hands of our adversaries in the diplomatic game. With an empire created, Italy intends to build a serene peace . . . But this constructive peace must be guaranteed against any threat with powerful means."

The Messagegero had a similar editorial and repeated Mussolini's warning at the Italian war games that Italy was ready with millions of trained men if trouble comes.

Henry T. Gorrell, of the Rome staff of the United Press, left Rome tonight at the "invitation" of the Italian government. He was accompanied to the French border by two special agents.

Story Basis of Action.

The Fascist government's "invitation to leave" the country was issued to Gorrell by Italian police Thursday after he had sent out a story about the arrest of communist agitators. Gorrell's dispatch was denied by the Italian press ministry, which later confirmed that approximately 20 arrests had been made but insisted that the action did not represent the "smashing of a large communist organization" as Gorrell had cabled.

Gorrell has held positions with the United Press in Columbus, Ohio, Washington, Buenos Aires and Rome.

Edith Maxwell, Her 25-Year Sentence Voided by High Court, Awaits New Trial

These camera studies of Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old mountain school teacher, are the first made of her since the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals held Friday that a lower court "erred" in sentencing her to 25 years for the murder of Trigg Maxwell, her father. The court said the evidence did not justify a first-degree murder verdict and ordered a new trial. The photographs were made at the Lee County Jail in Jonesville, Va., where Edith is held.

war veterans were attacked by a wild mob of Communists. In Munich during the post-war Soviet terror, hostages were shot by bolshevists just as today again in Spain."

Germany's chief executive emphasized, however, that he does not fear recurrence of such events in any other German cities.

"I have only one fear. I say it openly—that the countries around us, into which Bolshevist poison is eating its way, may succumb suddenly one after the other.

"And to such a development we could not remain indifferent. For we are, after all, a European nation.

"It is true enough we could lean back and say 'Let them slaughter their officers, murder their priests and intellectuals.' It's none of our business.'

"But only someone with the mentality of a child could take that attitude. We do not live on the moon. What happens in Europe does concern us.

"We are a European nation bound by cultural and commercial ties to our neighbor nations.

"There is, after all, a European community and I really believe as I shall say tomorrow (he delivers the concluding address of the Nazi convention then) we wild Nationalists are, after all, the best Europeans.

"Naturally we sympathize with the Nationalists because we can deal effectively only with countries organized on a national basis.

"Europe, led by a civilized regime, is something one could understand. But that Moscow should seek to dominate Europe!"

He threw up his hands.

"That is something we Germans can never tolerate. What Europe needs is friendly rivalry of well-organized states. Europe dominated by bolshevism bureaucracy would go completely under."

In the early morning Hitler stood for a moment's silence before Nurnberg's statue in memory of the nation's war dead.

Such a deep silence fell on the vast audience of 170,000 Germans that only the twittering of birds in the grove behind the monument could be heard.

As the crowd watched intently, the bare-headed, coatless leader, wearing on his khaki shirt the iron cross he won as a corporal in the World War, bowed his head before the monument, and set a wreath at its base.

Later, the crowd split the Sabbath quiet with its repeated cheers for its leader, Adolf Hitler, ruler and spokesman of the Third Reich.

The Nazi pageantry reached the convention's climax during the rallies of the Storm Troops, special guards and motor corps during the forenoon.

After he honored those who died for Germany in the war, Hitler consecrated about 150 new standards of the Nazi movement by touching them with the "blood flag" of 1923, the most treasured relic of the national socialist movement.

Later he stood in an open automobile on Adolf Hitler plaza in the center of the medieval city to take the salute for three hours from marching Nazi columns and formations.

The Luitpold Grove, a huge field encircled by ancient trees, was the setting for the day's rites. It is closed at one end by the monumental grand stand and at the other by the war memorial.

Starting from early dawn, the brown and black-shirted Hitlerites marched from their tent bivouacs to the grove where, by 8 a. m., there were 86,000 Storm Troopers, 18,000 special guards, and 15,000 active representatives of the Nazi motor corps.

They were stationed in their places with an exactitude and precision as though a space had been marked off for each "soldier of the Nazi government."

Hitler's appearance was the signal for a demonstration lasting several minutes. Finally, above the din of about 170,000 voices in the audience, der Fuehrer succeeded in shouting:

"Heil, men."

"Heil, leader," they chorused back.

The next part of the pageantry was the solemn march of the Nazi flag bearers, estimated at about 20,000, who appeared from the rear of the grove, paraded slowly across to the accompaniment of band music, and then ranged themselves in three massed tiers to the right and left of the huge grandstand.

Then followed the almost religious rite of honoring the war heroes.

The band played the deep-throated music of Wagner's "Goetterdaemmerung" as Hitler descended from the high rostrum and walked about 400 steps through the center of his black and brown shirted troops to the opposite end of the grove, where he deposited the wreath.

'Color Stories' Believed Factor In Verdict in Maxwell Case against Edith that was felt by the jury.

"Edith is wanting publicity," was a remark often heard, according to Wacks.

At that time, it would appear, Edith had nothing to do with the publicity. If her case is now familiar to people all over the world, it is because of the news stories that went out during and after her trial.

The 25-year sentence meted out to her was a shock to many persons, who felt that since she struck her father after he had attacked her, the punishment was far too harsh.

Subscribers of The Washington Post, feeling that way, raised a defense fund of more than $1,000, which money The Post used to retain Charles Henry Smith, noted lawyer of Alexandria, Va., and to inaugurate a fight for a new trial.

This fight bore fruit last week when the Virginia Supreme Court, meeting in Staunton, held that the evidence in the Maxwell trial was not sufficient to justify a first-degree murder verdict, and ordered the case tried over again.

Smith is expected to visit Wise this week. If Edith is not out on bail by then, he will seek to arrange bond with Judge H. A. W. Skeen, of the Wise County Circuit Court.

But his principal aim is to file a motion with the court asking for a change of venue. He is convinced that, under the circumstances, Edith can't hope for a fair trial in Wise County.

"The feeling in Wise County is so high," Smith said, "that the people are divided into factions. One thinks she is guilty and ought to be in prison for life. The other feels that she shouldn't be punished at all.

"Neither is impartial. It would be just as unfair to select for the jury a man who is convinced of her guilt as one who is convinced she is innocent. It doesn't make any difference. Jurors are supposed not to have made up their minds as to guilt or innocence."

In arguing to have the new trial held in some other Virginia county, Attorney Smith will cite the effect of the "color stories" on the populace of Wise.

"I am sure the reporters were well-intentioned," said Smith, "but some of the things they wrote were most unfortunate. And the anger they stirred up, I believe, certainly was visited on Edith.

"The fact is that Wise is far from a backwoods town. In fact, I am beginning to wonder if we have any more backwoods communities, now that we have the automobile, the movies and the radio.

"It happens that Wise County, with its coal mines, is one of the richest in the State. The town of Wise certainly has one of the best high schools in the State, and it can boast of many distinguished scholars and citizens.

"Gov. George Peery comes from that section of Virginia and so does C. Bascom Slemp who was in Congress and who was secretary to President Coolidge.

"No, it looks as if some of your journalistic colleagues went down to Wise with too many notions, gathered from 'The Trail of the Lonesome Pine.' But I am sure they didn't mean any harm."

Today the inevitable throng of visitors came here to see Edith Maxwell in her cell in the Lee County Jail. She was transferred here two months ago when the Wise County Jail underwent repairs.

Many of her visitors today asked and received her autograph.

resented in Madrid. The women and children will be removed in trucks, under special guard, and will be lodged in a monastery or convent near Madrid. They will live under protection of the Chilean flag.

Earlier tonight Premier Francisco Largo Caballero had accepted the diplomats' proposal. He added that if the rebels rejected this last offer, he would order the attack to continue "without cessation."

"If this last humanitarian attempt is refused," Caballero said, "we will end this burden of Alcazar one way or another, for this is war."

The castle, pounded by artillery and airplanes, is threatened with complete destruction. The besieged rebels and their women have been driven to underground dungeons.

The war ministry said it learned that rebel officers in the besieged Alcazar met Saturday to discuss the advisability of surrender, but that the meeting broke up in confusion, some of the officers advocating surrender while others demanded resistance to the end.

San Sebastian, Spain, Sept. 13.—Gen. Emilio Mola's rebel troops, masters of San Sebastian, raised the red and gold flag of the old monarchy over the deserted capital of Guipuzcoa Province today.

The last refugees quit the northern Bay of Biscay city at noon as insurgent Moorish troops moved through the city.

Men and materials were moved up from the former battle fronts of Renteria to establish a new base of operations within San Sebastian, once the heart of Spanish government resistance in the Bay of Biscay region.

great prosperity "if" Germany had Russia's rich Ukraine Valley, generally was received calmly—regarded as merely another indication of the Soviet Union's oft repeated charge that Hitler is a menace to world peace.

The Nazi dictator, observers here asserted, was believed trying to provoke the Soviets to action, rather than signalizing readings to make war at the moment.

Some Soviet commentators professed to believe Hitler might desire to provoke Russian action, then step in to effect retaliation.

The official Soviet press long has predicted that the danger of German war was near and added the belief that the Kraine would be the battleground.

But Hitler, authoritative sources here asserted, is believed not yet ready to unleash his weapons.

When Hitler first came to power Soviets generally admitted alarm, lest they be unable to defend the Ukraine.

Now, however, the Russian army has been doubled, put on wheels, equipped with tanks and a huge airfleet.

Military railways, highways and strong border fortresses protect the Soviet state.

Little Entente Maps Coalition Of War Forces

Council Studies Proposed Unified Action in Any Military Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 13.—The Little Entente council was reliably reported today to have considered a huge co-operative armament plan which would make the three-power group one of Europe's most imposing military forces.

The suggestion, attributed to Premier Milan Hodza, of Czechoslovakia, was that each of the Little Entente nations—Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Rumania—should contribute material and workmanship so that their individual armies might act as units of the whole group in an emergency.

The proposal, said to have been offered at today's session of the Little Entente representatives, was described as that bloc's answer to the rearmament of its neighbors, particularly Italy and Germany.

A member of the Yugoslav delegation said the plan contemplated co-operation under three headings:

1. Exchange of raw materials for munitions.
2. Erection of munitions factories at many places in the three States.
3. Exchange of farm products suitable for canning to create a food reserve.

It was suggested Rumania might provide petroleum, while all the Yugoslav mines could produce more than enough metal. Czechoslovakia, it was said, could contribute technical skill and factories.

Advocates of the plan pointed out the armies of the three countries could be equipped on a co-operative basis, with virtually no exchange of money, and the states would be virtually independent of other nations.

The delegates made a great show of the friendly spirit of the meetings, and did everything possible to discount numerous reports that private quarrels had arisen.

Parole System Is Condemned By Prison Unit

Politics, Lax Administration Are Blamed for Bad Public Reputation.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—The prison parole system in the United States was condemned as parole "in name only" today in a report distributed at the opening session of the American Prison Association Congress.

Defending "the theory of the indeterminate sentence and parole," the report—compiled by the prison association of New York as a result of a nationally distributed questionnaire—blamed politics and what it referred to as lax administration for giving paroles a bad public reputation.

"The people are led to believe that there is a parole system in operation," the report asserted, "but not more than six or seven States and the Federal Government have what can be termed suitable and scientific parole methods."

"Isolated, but notorious, cases of parole violation * * * in some jurisdictions (wherein parole is not worthy of the name) should not be sufficient reason for a general condemnation" of the system, it said.

The report called for uniform laws and practices to give parole a fair chance.

As evidence that "public opinion * * * that present parole laws and methods are unintelligent and unscientific" was well founded, the report cited these findings from its survey of 133 prisons, reformatories and juvenile industrial schools in the 48 States.

In 42 institutions, there were 12,182 prisoners free on parole, with no parole officer to check their behavior.

In 36 institutions, there was one parole officer in each—a total of 36—to care for a total of 8,566 parolees.

In 14 institutions, there were two parole officers in each—a total of 28—to supervise a total of 2,407 parolees.

In 10 institutions, there were three parole officers in each—a total of 30—to supervise a total of 3,593 parolees.

The report said tabulation of these figures, with data from the other 31 institutions studied, showed the average parole officer in the country had 244 paroled prisoners to look after at the same time.

Ludke May Take Court Action This Week in Flag-Salute Case

Maryland School Superintendent 'Doesn't Know What He's Going to Do;' Meanwhile, Barred Children Yearn to Return to Classroom.

Court action which August Ludke hopes will wipe away the tears of his little children, barred from school because of their religious belief, will be instituted this week, it appeared last night, after Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of schools in Maryland, declared he did not know what he was going to do.

Anna Louise, 10, and her older brother, Fred, 12, are heart-broken every time they see the school bus go by the Ludke home at Oxon Hill, Md., the father said yesterday. Every weekday morning since September 9 it has gone by without stopping. Playmates in the bus wave to Anna Louise and Fred, and they wave back, and then the tears start to flow.

The younger children, Esther, 7, and Walter, 8, are taking their absence much more light-heartedly. To them it is a joyous prolongation of vacation time, and they lie abed late and chuckle at their young schoolmates.

But the father, a 40-year-old member of the Jehova's Witness sect, has grown restive and anxious for positive action on the case. Still firm is his belief that his children should not be compelled to salute the American flag every morning as part of daily school work, he has urged his attorney, Edmund D. Campbell, to proceed with mandamus action to compel the school board to allow his youngsters to enter school at once.

Campbell last night said he would wait a few more days for the superintendent to call a special meeting of the board, and that if nothing happens within a day or so in regards to a petition laid before them last Friday, he will go to court. Both he and the father are unwilling to permit the children's falling behind in their work.

Next regular meeting of the board is in October. It is to remote a date and too uncertain in any event to satisfy the wishes of the Ludke parents that their children's education be unimpaired. The county board already has refused to revoke the action which ousted the children last spring.

Dr. Cook, reached by long distance in Baltimore, stated:

"I don't know what the board is going to do. I'm not going to answer any questions. I'm sick and tired of having people ask me about this case. I won't discuss it at all. I don't care if it is a matter of great public interest."

Johnson Dies Of Pneumonia In Minnesota

Came to U.S. From Sweden in Nineties; Served in House, Senate.

Meeker County, Minn. Later he added 120 acres to this.

The house on the farm wasn't much, and Johnson always admitted it.

"But I have a great barn," he used to say years later. "It cost $7,000 and we have 24 cows in it."

Johnson's first public office was that of justice of the peace. An early biographer said that he was a mixture of "sense and nonsense." The voters apparently thought the sense more than balanced the nonsense, for they pushed him up the political ladder. He became township assessor, clerk of the school board and a member of the State Legislature.

Sought Governorship.

When the Farmer-Labor Party was formed in Minnesota, Magnus Johnson was its nominee for Governor. He ran against Gov. Preus, a Republican, and came within 14,000 votes of winning. That was in 1922. In the same election, Henrik Shipstead, also a Farmer-Laborite, defeated Frank B. Kellogg, a Republican, for a seat in the United States Senate.

A year later, Senator Knute Nelson, a Republican, died, and in a special election called to fill the vacancy Johnson was victorious.

He didn't remain in the Senate long. In the regular election of 1924—the year of the Coolidge landslide—he was defeated by the late Thomas Schall.

Johnson came to Washington again in 1932, but this time as a member of the House of Representatives. This time he didn't attract much attention. The hurly-burly of the fast-moving New Deal cast a shadow over him and all other "picturesque" members. Also his ideas no longer seemed very radical.

He was defeated for re-election in 1934 and went back to Meeker County, his overalls, his cows and his pigs.

Pope to Assail Reds in Speech On War Today

May Suggest Way to Fight Communism; Welcome Spanish Refugees.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Sept. 13.—Pope Pius let it be known today he will condemn the excesses of communism in his address tomorrow to Spanish civil war refugees.

Vatican prelates asserted the pontiff, bowed with grief because of the grave Spanish situation, prays incessantly that S[illegible]iards may add "prayer" to their weapons in what he sees as a battle against communism.

Working on the speech he intends to give to the Spanish refugees, the Pope reveal[illegible] to his attendants that he intends to employ about 3,000 words, 1,500 of which will "scourge communism and its excesses." The remainder will be devoted to welcoming the refu[illegible]

May Suggest [illegible]ans.

Many prelates predicted the Pope would suggest some positive means of combatting communism.

They pointed to his most recent important pronouncement, the encyclical on moving pictures, and recalled he did not adopt mere negative thought in condemning bad movies.

He adopted "positive thought," they added, in suggesting practical means of avoiding them—virtual world censorship under the direction of Catholic bishops.

They believed this positive tendency of his holiness would be repeated tomorrow.

Hindered in Proposal.

At the same time, they said, political considerations hindered the Pope in advocating a crusade against communism because communism is the policy of a nation, Russia, as well as a debated political doctrine.

Nevertheless, the Pope's feelings on the subject of communism have become so strong, Vatican prelates said, thaat he might even go to that length in his speech tomorrow.

That his speech will be an appeal for some sort of world action was taken for granted by the papal associates.

The holy father will speak from his summer residence at Castel Gandolfo and the address will be broadcast throughout the world. (The speech will begin about 6 a. m. Eastern daylight saving time.

Jewish Forum Books Russell To Debate Here

Noted British Philosopher to Meet Rabbi Heller on December 8.

Lord Bertrand Russell, the British philosopher, will headline a list of distinguished lecturers and debaters who are scheduled to take part in the National Temple Forum of the Washington Hebrew Congregation this winter.

Russell will debate with Rabbi James G. Heller, of Cincinnati, rabbi of the mother temple of Reform Judaism, on "Do Morals Need Religion?"

In announcing the new schedule yesterday, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, junior rabbi of the congregation, said that last season's series was so successful that the number of evenings would be increased from five to seven. The lectures will be on the spiritual problems of our day.

First to speak will be the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, of the Community Church of New York. Dr. Holmes will speak on "Prophets of Doom: Are They Right or Wrong?" in the Temple building at 816 Eighth street, October 27.

Following Dr. Holmes there will be a monthly lecture through April, including three debates and three single speakers. This season, there will be no symposia. The list of speakers for the new season is as follows:

November 15—Debate between Benjamin Stolberg, economist and journalist, and Rabbi Louis I. Newman, of Congregation Rodolph Sholom, New York City, on "Jews and the World."

December 8—Debate between Lord Bertrand Russell and Rabbi James G. Heller.

January 17—Lecture by James G. McDonald, former higher commissioner for refugees of the League of Nations, on "Today's Threat to Freedom."

February 7—Princess Maria Helga Lowenstein, wife of the head of the former Catholic center party of Germany on "A Few Thoughts About Germany."

March 21—Debate between Lewis Browne, famous author and skeptic, and Rabbi De Sola Pool, distinguished rabbi of the oldest synagogue in America, Shearith Israel, New York City, on "What Makes a Jew?"

April—Lecture by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, noted orator of Cleveland, exact date and subject to be announced later.

Paredes Not to Quit Post, Rosario Reports

An article in the Manila, P. I., Daily Bulletin saying that Quentin Paredes, Philippine resident commissioner in Washington, would "discuss the question of resignation" with President Manuel Quezon was denied here last night by Antonio Rosario, private secretary to the commissioner.

In a dispatch from Manila last night the Associated Press reported that the Bulletin had "learned on good authority" that Paredes was returning to the Philippines to discuss his resignation with Quezon. The newspaper added that Paredes' friends said he was anxious to resume his private law practice in Manila.

Edward Leaves Vienna; Vacation Nearing Close

Vienna, Sept. 13 (AP).—King Edward of Great Britain, nearing the end of his vacation which started August 8, left tonight by train for Zurich, Switzerland, from where he was expected to fly back to London in his own plane.

He presented gold cufflinks to many Viennese who contributed to the enjoyment of his few days' stay here.

The British monarch also made a final call at the clinic of Dr. Heinrich Neumann the eye, ear and nose specialist, whom Edward consulted concerning the possible effects of a slight cold, accompanied him to the station.

Farm Meetings Set by Wallace To Discuss Aid

Crop Insurance, Maximum Benefits Programs Will Be Mapped.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace yesterday announced a series of farmers' community meetings designed to map out next year's "agricultural conservation program."

Wallace said the AAA planned the meetings in the farm areas in order to discuss crop insurance and possible maximum limits on benefit payments to each farm.

The Agriculture Secretary said the program aimed at providing "greater abundance for the average American home," and should "help to check soil erosion, improve fertility, encourage better land use, and maintain farm income."

Describing these as "sound objectives," he said the farm program "will serve not only agricultural welfare but national welfare" by bringing "about a better balance in the production of feed and food."

Listed among "questions to be discussed" at the farmers sessions, were:

"Should a maximum total conservation allowance be established for each farm? If such an allowance were established, how should it be earned?"

"Is it necessary to have a more comprehensive crop insurance program than that provided by the agricultural conservation and commodity loan programs?"

Wallace has said there is a need for a vast program of Federal crop insurance as a possible cushion for drought years.

Other matters suggested for discussion by farmers included possible changes in basis of payment, crop classifications, soil-building practices, acreage bases, and the recently announced "range land" program for Western States.

The announcement said that a "definite program should be ready for farmers by the first of the year." It added that the community meetings will be followed by county committee meetings in October and State meetings in November and December.

The country is divided into five large regions for administration by the AAA and numerous regional sessions were listed in the announcement.

Santa Fe Enacts Spanish Conquest

Santa Fe, N. Mex., Sept. 13 (AP).—While the thunder of a 25-gun salute echoed over pine and cedar covered hills, armored Don Diego De Vargas re-enacted for the 224th consecutive year the reconquest of the New World's oldest capital.

Their helmets and metal corslets shining, their lances and swords hled smartly at attention, modern-day capitans of De Vargas' army commanded their bronged troooopers to halt while the general reclaimed for his Spanish king—just as the original De Vargas did in 1693—"La Villa Real De Santa Fe De San Francisco De Assisi" (the royal city of the holy faith of Saint Francis of Assisi).

Today's pageant was one of the highlights of the annual fiesta staged annually since 1712 in New Mexico's ancient capital city.

Religiously correct in every detail, it portrayed the ere-entry of Gen. De Vargas 13 years after rebellious Pueblo Indians threw off the yoke of Spain, massacred the Frinciscan Friars and drove out the Spaniards.

Retired Officer Killed in Crash Of Car in West

Lieut. Col. Humphreys Was in Colorado for His Health.

Lieut. Col. Thomas Ogden Humphreys, retired, of Washington, was killed when his car skidded off a road near Castle Rock, Colo., his mother was informed here yesterday. The accident occurred Saturday afternoon.

Lieut. P. M. Mosier, who was in the car, escaped injury. Mosier said Humphreys apparently fell asleep at the wheel. The 48-year-old officer had gone West for his health four weeks ago and was a patient at the Fitzsimmons Hospital in Denver.

Humphreys was divorced from his wife a year ago. She was remarried last month to Henry S. Wheeler, mayor of Newport, R. I. Her son, Thomas O. Humphreys, jr., 19, was coming from Newport to Washington last night by train.

Humphreys lived at the Hotel Martinique prior to his departure for the West. His mother, Mrs. P. Humphreys, lives at 2024 First avenue northwest.

The colonel was killed at 2 p. m. Saturday. At 10 p. m. the coroner of Castle Rock telephoned the victim's mother here. He had been carrying her auto registration card in his pocket.

Attempts by relatives to get further details by telegraph and telephone have been unavailing.

The former wife has been living in Chevy Chase. There, a month ago, she was remarried. She is the former Carole Garnett, and was married to Col. Humphreys 19 years.

The 19-year-old son figured in a yacht wreck last march. While cruising off Cape Hatteras with Capt. Homer B. Willard, their yacht, the "Kaydet," sank. The party was rescued by the S. S. Rosario and taken to Puerto Rico.

Mrs. Fenwick Dies After Long Illness

Mrs. Dora H. Fenwick, 58, died yesterday in her home at Carter's lane and Browning road, East Riverdale, Md., following a year's illness. She was a native of Washington and spent her early life here, but moved to East Riverdale shortly after her marriage to Charles Francis Fenwick 37 years ago, and had since continuously resided there.

Surviving Mrs. Fenwick are her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Thomas V. Lake and Mrs. Lloyd Burkley and one son, Charles Francis Fenwick, jr., all of East Riverdale.

Services for Mrs. Fenwick will be held Wednesday at the residence, with the Rev. Robert Browning, of Baltimore, officiating. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

D. C. Woman Clerk Plunges to Death

Masontown, Pa., Sept. 13 (AP).—A woman, identified by witnesses as Miss Alice M. Frankenburger, 54, Government worker at Washington, jumped or fell to her death from the Masontown Bridge into the Monongahela River today.

Officers said she was en route to Carmichaels to visit a brother.

Miss Frankenburger, a native of Morgantown, W. Va., had lived in Washington for more than a year. She was employed as a clerk by the WPA. Her address was 1531 O street northwest.

Friends last night said funeral services would be held tomorrow in Smithfield, Pa.

Simes Takes Senior Amateur Bicycle Title

St. Louis, Sept. 13 (AP).—Under a blazing sun that drove spectators to cover, Jackie Simes, Harrington Park, N. Y., Bike Flash, today became senior champion of the 1936 national amateur bicycle matches by winning the 50-mile event at Forest Park.

The race took 2 hours 23 minutes and 24.9 seconds, almost 20 minutes under the mark set by Cecil Hursey, 1935 champion, at last year's event.

Suspect Slain in Battle With Chicago Officers

Chicago, Sept. 12 (AP).—Frank Lappen, 45-year-old taxi driver, was shot and killed in his home today by three police officers after he had barricaded himself in a bedroom and opened fire on the detectives who had gone to his home to serve a warrant charging him with an attack on a woman.

Lappen's daughter, Bernice, 20, was shot in the left wrist when she stepped into the cross fire in an attempt to halt the shooting.

Newly Purchased, Horse Disappears

Blackie, a horse with a homing instinct, was loose in the Northwest section of Washington last night, presumably headed toward his Maryland home.

Only yesterday Blackie became the property of John G. Heide, retired mounted policeman. Since leaving the force several years ago, Heide has kept horses at his place at 2248 Forty-eighth street northwest. He bought Blackie from the Race Farms in nearby Maryland.

Blackie disappeared after being turned out to graze in the Heide pastures. Heide potified police, describing the horse as being black, 8 years old and 15½ hands high.

'Invasion' Story Of Seized Trio Called Absurd

Men Arrested With Arms Insist Cargo Was for Defense of Nation.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Sept. 13.—Customs officials branded as a "fantastic absurdity" today the story of three men that a truckload of guns and ammunition, confiscated when they were arrested, was to be used in an expected war involving the United States.

Despite long questioning of the trio, taken into custody yesterday, authorities said destination of the arms remained a mystery.

Preliminary hearing for the men, listed as Willard Campbell, 36, Atlantic City, N. J.; Alexander Ritchie, 36, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Thomas Murray, 47, Atlantic City, was set for tomorrow at Gulfport, Miss.

Edward A. Gleason, supervising agent at New Orleans, said specific charges against them would be attempting to export arms and ammunition, and interstate transportation of arms and ammunition.

The customs official said the seizure was "not accidental" and that he expected further developments. He said Federal authorities had information of the truck's trip along the gulf coast and that the arrest was "thoroughly planned."

Gleason said questioning of the trio at the Biloxi Coast Guard base and later in New Orleans brought from them the story of the expected conflict involving this country.

He said Campbell told him the consignment was to have been taken to Florida, where a band of "courageous young men" was to have been enlisted and taught the use of armaments as a preparedness move.

The seized equipment included 200 rifles, 21,500 rounds of ammunition, a portable 40-meter radio transmitting set, chemicals, canned goods and furniture.

O'Brien Praises 'Father Divine' At N.Y. Meeting

Lemke's Running Mate Is Speaker at Session After Parade.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 13.—Before a shouting, chanting throng, Thomas C. O'Brien, of Boston, Union Party Vice Presidential candidate, appeared today on a platform with "Father Divine," praising the colored leader in a mass meeting described by Divine's spokesmen as nonpolitical.

O'Brien, running mate of Representative William Lemke, who has the support of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, did not directly accept the "platform" of followers of the colored leader, but said he was fully cognizant of it.

A previous speaker, unidentified in the confusion, had told the open air meeting "no one will get political indorsement (of the Divine followers) unless he accepts our platform 'Truth, Righteousness and Justice.'"

O'Brien, as he started his address, turned toward Father Divine and addressed him with the salutation familiar to the latter's followers: "Peace, my friend."

"Ain't it wonderful," came the response from the crowd.

O'Brien likened Divine to Abraham Lincoln and those who "unselfishly aided him in freeing the slaves." "We have been beneficiaries," he added, "of their struggle."

The meeting, held in Madison Square Park, was preceded by a parade of thousands of Father Divine's followers. Fifty mounted men and women "disciples" wearing green bands over tan riding clothes were followed by trucks carrying brass bands. Then came a long line of automobiles, some bearing license plates of California, Pennsylvania, Florida and Texas. Next was a long line of pedestrain followers.

Coughlin Blast.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin asserted tonight that "it is time for us to throw out of Congress bodily everyone who says 'support Roosevelt.'"

In an address broadcast throughout Massachusetts, he urged the nomination for Senator of Thomas C. O'Brien by a sticker and write-in campaign. O'Brien, Union Party Vice Presidential candidate, shared tonight's program with the priest.

Father Coughlin also urged support in Tuesday's Massachusetts primaries of candidates for the House of Representatives who have been indorsed by the National Union for Sociay Justice. He asked his followers to "ring door bells" and each to obtain five additional votes.

He said that under President Roosevelt "the Democratic Congress meekly submitted to a new kind of dictatorship—must legislation," and that otherwise the members of Congress were "threatened" with a "loss of their patronage."

Alonzo Thompson, of Chesapeake, W. Va., his alleged accomplice, is serving a life sentence in Ohio Penitentiary.

The youth faced Mrs. Joseph Keegan, who claimed him as her son and to her plea to "tell what is wrong," and "let mother help," shouted:

"You are not my mother. N never saw you before!"

Landon Laughs As Pastor Tells 'New Deal' Yarn

Story Satirizing Spending Is Occasion; Nominee Visits Publisher.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Portland, Me., Sept. 13.—Gov. Alf M. Landon laughed right out loud in church this morning. The laugh was occasioned by a story told by the Rev. Albert D. Parker, pastor of the Chestnut Street Methodist Episcopal Church, where the Republican Presidential candidate and Senator Frederick Hale, of Maine, attended the service.

To illustrate a point in his sermon, the pastor told the story of a colored man who spent a dollar riding on a merry-go-round. A friend who was upbraiding him for his extravagance said:

"You have spent all your money and you ain't been nowhere."

London and Hale put their heads together and laughed. Those in the congregation who were close by said that one of them whispered something about the New Deal.

The Kansas Governor joined in the singing of hymns and after considerable difficulty produced a bill to put into the collection plate. As the plate was passed, he pulled a roll of bills from his pocket, held them at his side and looked at them one by one. Evidently not finding one of the desired denomination, he pushed the roll back into his pocket and borrowed a bill from Hale, dropping it into the plate. From where this reporter was sitting the denomination of the bill could not be seen.

Annoyed by Photographer.

As the Governor and the Senator took their places in the pew, which had been marked off with red ribbon, a photographer in the balcony set off a flash bulb. Landon was visibly annoyed. He shook his head at the photographer and then motioned impatiently for him to leave.

The Rev. Mr. Parker made no mention of Laandon in his sermon or in his prayers. The only time he indicated that the candidate was present was when near the close of the service, he asked the congregation to remain standing at their seats until "our distinguished brother and guest leaves the church."

The pastor took as the text of his sermon a sentence from the fifth chapter of Genesis: "And Enoch walked with God."

"It is childish," he said, "to think that God should change his direction and go with us, yet I have seen saints and sinners too who thought he should go with them."

The sermon was brief. The fairly large church was not quite filled.

Returns to Hale Home.

From the services Gov. Landon returned to the home of Senator Hale where he had spent Saturday night following his speech here.

This afternoon the candidate's schedule was changed to allow him to make a 75-mile automobile trip to the home of Robert Choate, at Danvers, Mass. Choate is editor and publisher of the Boston Herald. Gov. Landon planned to spend the night at the Choate home and then to motor to Nashua, N. H., where he will board his special train at 12:28 p. m. tomorrow. The change in arrangements necessitated canceling a back-platform speech at Rochester, N. H., which had been aarranged for earlier in the day. The train will leave here at 8:30 a. m.

From Nashua, the train will go to Worcester, Mass., where the Governor spoke briefly Saturday. No speech is scheduled there tomorrow. The schedul calls for rear-platform speeches at Springfield and Pittsfield, Mass., and at Albany, Schenectady, Utica and Syracuse, N. Y.

Landon will arrive in Chicago Tuesday morning. Another series of rear-platform talks is scheduled for Wednesday at Coal City, Streator, Chillicothe, Galesburg and Stronghurst, Ill.; Fort Madison, Iowa, and Laplata, Marcelline, Carrollton and Henrietta, Mo. He will arrive in Topeka Tuesday night. One Friday he will address the Young Republicans at Topeka.

than 59 per cent of the total school budget. In 1935, more than 67 per cent of the total school budget went to teachers. It was true, however, that salaries of teachers were cut on an average of 19 per cent in Kansas, as occurred in other States. Gov. Landon, at the same time, took a salary cut of 25 per cent.

Report of Markham.

"Mr. W. T. Markham, Kansas State superintendent of public instruction, who was quoted last night by Gov. Brann, is an elected officer, a Democrat, and an associate of Harry Woodring, Gov. Landon's predecessor. Mr. Makham, in an official report on August 13, 1936, said:

"'Kansas completed the last school year without a single boy or girl being denied the opportunity for a common school education. Not a school was closed except by the action of the school board of the district in which that school was located. When a district decided not to operate its school, it levied taxes and saw to it that every child in that district was sent to nearby districts for that school year.'

"He further said:

"'There were 444 school districts which did not operate last year. These were districts where the people realized what poor business it is for them to pay a teacher and maintain a school for only a few pupils. So they sent their children to nearby schools, saved money for themselves, and enabled the other districts to provide a better teacher and better facilities. We have one school district in Kansas which had one single boy enrolled throughout the school year. The district paid a teacher $90 a month to teach that one child.'

Free Transportation.

"The 'Rees law,' indorsed by Gov. Landon, made the consolidation of these rural district schools possible and provided for free transporation for the children. Furthermore, the number of teachers employed throughout Gov. Landon's administration, in spite of these consolidations, is still higher than during the last year of his predecessor's administration.

"The office of education of the United States Department of the Interior in Circular No. 151, which gives the latest statistics on the subject, shows that the average salary of teachers has been 7 per cent higher in Kansas under Landon than it has been in Maine under Brann.

"Kansas stands fifth among the 48 States in literacy. In the country the figure for illiteracy is 4.3 per cent, in Kansas it is 1.2 per cent. There are twice as many students in high schools and colleges in Kansas in proportion to the population as there are in New York State.

"Gov. Landon's real sentiment in regard to education is best expressed in the following quotation:

"'A child reared in a hamlet or on a distant farm deserves the same opportunities to receive an education and to develop as are given the boy or girl who attends the most richly endowed school.'"

Driver Fined $100.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 13.—Lewis M. Stallings, of 116 Arch street, charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, was arraigned yesterday in the justice of the peace court and fined $100 and costs. He was committed in default. In addition he was fined $1 for reckless driving.

Maine Election Today to Affect Race's Outcome

Republicans Give an Edge as Battle Nears End; Vote to Be Heavy.

ter was sent from Washington by the Democratic National Committee to edit it. Baxter at the time was connected with committee headquarters. He previously had been employed as public relations man for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Baxter is putting plenty of punch into the paper. It carries little news except highly editorial articles concerning the campaign. Daily on the front page is printed a bold-face edtiorial in which the "sinister" aspects of Republican support are stressed. Saturday night the News carried two eight-column headlines on the Brann speech. The Landon speech was given scant attention. Ownership of the News, the paper itself contends, still rests with the Maine Publishing Corporation. Philip H. Chapman, president. Where it obtained the money for its sudden resurrection it has not revealed. It carries almost no advertising. It is reported here Baxter will return to Washington shortly after the election.

Another political strategist sent into Maine by the Democorats is Jack Demsey, former heavyweight champion, who is in Brann's corner.

Believe Landon Helped.

Republicans believe Gov. Landon's visit here, his enthusiastic reception all the way up the New England Coast, and his indorsement of Senator White will do much to solidify their strength.

The Townsend movement also is having its effect in the campaign. Thrifty citizens of Maine are interested in the California doctor's promise of $200 a month for the aged. Townsend Clubs flourish. James C. Oliver, Republican candidate for the House of Representatives in the first district, which includes Portland, has the support of the Townsend followers and he is expected to win over Simon M. Hamlin, Democratic incumbent.

In the second district Clyde H. Smith, Republican, is said to have an edge over Ernest L. McLean, Democrat. In the third district, Representative Brewster, Republican and former Governor, is expected to win easily.

In the second district, besides Smith and McLean, two other candidates are seeking the House seat. They are J. Clarence Leckemby, a Baptist minister, runnnig as an independent Townsendite, and A. Raymond Rogers. Their votes may change the outcome there.

Barrows Favorite.

In the Governorship race, Lewis O. Barrows, Republican, was said to be the likely winner over F. Harold Dubord. The latter ran for the Senate two years ago and was defeated by Senator Hale by 1,200 votes.

Although Maine, one of the smaller States in population, does not count so much in the electoral vote for President, the importance of its September election is far out of proportion to its size. Both Republicans and Democrats are making a desperate effort to swing the State. The psychological effect of a victory upon the Nation is held by both parties to be of tremendous importance. A defeat for the Republicans, especially after the visit of Gov. Landon, admittedly would be almost a fatal blow.

But, in the words of the Kansas Governor, that party believes it is "on the eve of a great victory." The Republican viewpoint again was expressed by Landon when he said in his speech that a Maine success "will start a victory parade that will span the Nation."

Time To Study Taxes.

In casting about for new sources of revenue it is natural for District officials to review the local taxes on automobiles. Taxes paid by motorists here are light compared with those levied by many States. While there is no logic in the argument that District levies on motor vehicles should equal those of any State, or group of States, it is entirely reasonable to turn to this source of revenue when more funds are needed for streets, bridges and other improvements catering to the needs or pleasures of all who use the automobile.

Certainly a weight tax on automobiles, or an increase in the gasoline tax, would be preferable to a boost in the levy on general property. It would be well, however, to restrict this increase to the amount needed for highway building and repair, traffic regulation and other services directly connected with motor traffic. Taxes on automobiles and the fuel they use are not an equitable means of raising revenue for general purposes. For example, a heavy tax on motor vehicles to support the schools might handicap thousands of poorly-paid taxicab drivers out of all proportion to the benefits they would receive.

Washington's need is for more and not less equitable taxation. Instead of merely considering new levies upon motorists, the Commissioners could properly begin work on a complete overhauling of the local tax system. Final recommendations would be contingent, of course, upon the new fiscal arrangement between the national and local governments which the President's special committee is now working out. With that issue settled, however, revision of the existing tax law will become an urgent problem.

Obviously the taxes on motorists can be much more satisfactorily adjusted when the entire subject of District revenue is under review. It would be wise for the Commissioners to designate a group of officials to study this and other tax proposals, with the objective of drawing up a new tax bill as soon as the results of the fiscal relations study are known.

Comes The Fall.

Though the mugginess still keeps white suits and summer frocks a la mode, one glance at the sports pages will confirm the calendar's accuracy in proclaiming the near approach of fall.

There's an unmistakable tang in their columns. To begin with, the World Series is at hand. The Yankees have—to speak the argot—clinched the American League pennant and, much to Washington's amazement, the home-town Nats have a fighting chance to overtake the Chicago White Sox in second place. In the older baseball league, the other New York team is on top but the St. Louis Cards are challenging them strongly.

Consider, also, tennis. The brilliant defeat of Helen Jacobs by Alice Marble had a real autumnal snap to it though many a follower of the game will feel that the redoubtable Helen was once more cruelly let down by the gods of the racquet and net: A win at Forest Hills this year would have given her the undisputed title of queen of the world's courts, for she already had the Wimbledon championship under her belt. And if Budge had only won those two points in the fifth set and taken Fred Perry in the men's finals, the day's exhilaration would have been complete.

Golfers have their eyes on the national amateur matches beginning today. Lawson Little will not be playing, of course, having recently turned pro—a move which he celebrated adequately by snapping up the Canadian Open on Saturday. But Ross Somerville and Francis Ouimet, two former champions, will be on hand as will also Johnny Goodman and all the rest. The polo people, too, are contributing their roto-gravured bit to the excitement with their season-end games pointing to the international matches with the Argentines this week. Similarly, the turfmen and the yachtsmen and all the other men (and women) of the outdoor sports world are adding to the general zest with their September finales.

And if the leaves have not yet turned hereabouts, nevertheless there are flecks of color to be seen. They are the jerseys of football players. Now they are engaged largely in calisthenics, but soon they will be making Saturday afternoons bellow with the sound of touchdown cheers. Of course, the professional teams have already begun their schedules.

To complete the mid-September scene, there is the debate over Jesse Owens' amateur standing. As every autumn landscape includes the sere stalks and pods of the past summer's flowers, so this reminder of the Olympics still remains on the sports pages to recall the sunny glory that blazed down on the athletes from the United States in the stadium at Berlin in August.

Hitler Girds For War.

The Frankfurter Zeitung, pathetic remnant of a once great liberal newspaper, on Saturday urged foreign observers not to take the fulminations at the Nazi congress in Nuremberg too seriously. Its placatory editorial, evidently designed to lull uneasiness aroused by Propaganda Minister Goebbel's blast against Bolshevism last week, made what at the time of writing might have seemed a good point. German foreign policy, it said, is not determined at a Nazi party congress but solely and entirely by Der Fuehrer himself.

Scarcely was the ink dry on the Frankfurter Zeitung's editorial when Chancellor Hitler, speaking as though determined to denounce the last vestiges of German liberal thought, deliberately tore its argument to shreds. As an unqualified threat of intended aggression against Russia, the speech of this sole arbiter of German foreign policy was far more inflammatory than anything said by Dr. Goebbels. Seldom, if ever, in the relations of two governments nominally at peace has there been anything to match the way in which Hitler publicly linked the restoration of German prosperity with the annexation of Russian territory.

If these remarks had been made by a lesser Nazi leader, or if they did not follow a carefully prepared campaign to stimulate German enthusiasm for a war of conquest against Russia, their effect might be discounted. But the evidence makes it impossible to believe that this public coveting of the wheat fields of the Ukraine, the forests of Siberia and the mineral resources of the Urals, was any slip of the tongue on Hitler's part. It was a deliberate and culminating action in the preparation of the German people for aggressive war.

One must see behind the panoply of bayonets to realize why war with Russia is becoming necessary for Nazi Germany. Back of her well-fed and beautifully equipped army is a people whose standards of living are being progressively beaten down to a slave level by the inevitable failure of nationalistic economics for a country so poor in natural resources.

Mass discontent has been averted so far by Hitler's triumphs in releasing the Reich from the fetters of the Versailles Treaty. The Jews and other minorities have played their parts as targets against which the bitterness of the downtrodden German people could be released. The autocratic tyranny of Nazi rule, unparalleled in modern history, has also helped to prevent any popular upheaval. But these factors can only delay, cannot avert, the internal explosion which deteriorating economic conditions are rendering steadily more probable.

Since the reoccupation of the Rhineland, last March, Hitler has been fencing, like the dexterous leader which he undoubtedly is, to find the weakest spot in the ring of justly alarmed states by which resurgent Germany is surrounded. He has learned that Great Britain would throw her strength into the lists in the event of any move to the west. He knows that he would lose the precious goodwill of Italy, improved by the Ethiopian business, if he should strike southwards. He realizes that the return of Germany's colonies would offer no solution of his economic problems, even if there were any immediate chance of such restoration. There remains the possibility of expansion either to the southeast or to the east, and either of these may well mean war with Russia.

Therefore Russia stands out ever more clearly as the potential foe. And all the machinery of the totalitarian state is concentrated on preparing the German people for the war which Hitler seemingly has now decided to risk before his regime breaks down. The Spanish revolution has provided opportunity to denounce what he vaguely calls Bolshevism as a force which should be attacked at its center—Moscow. Already he has gone far in preaching the holy war of German Kultur against the alleged Semitism of the East. To this he now adds a picture of what Russia's resources might mean to the bellies of his people. It is a picture on which Hitler wants his half-starved helots to brood while the next step is prepared.

For many reasons, the move is one of desperation. A first consequence of this speech at Nuremberg will be to stimulate Russia's already gigantic preparations of defense. Another will doubtless be to swing Poland further away from the German orbit and hasten the developing Franco-Polish alliance. The very moves which Hitler must make to arouse a lust for war among his people are bound to strengthen the ring of steel around his borders.

But the Fuhrer, caught in that web which slowly tightens around the limbs of every tyrant, can no longer move deliberately; is no longer his own master. The German winter is cold and harsh, and it approaches fast. And in perspective the feverish struggles of this little fanatic with his doom makes epic tragedy, as well as a crisis bitterly grim for western civilization.

Maine Goes To The Polls.

Political analysts have often discredited the legend that a victory for either political party in Maine's September election foretells a triumph for that same party in the subsequent national balloting in November. Still all eyes today are turned toward the Pine Tree State for an indication as to which way the political wind is blowing.

Twice since 1900 the country has refused to follow the lead of Maine in its September elections—in 1912 and 1916, when Woodrow Wilson was elected. Even if there were no exceptions of this sort, Maine would be a very uncertain barometer of national political sentiment. It is normally a Republican State. Only a Democratic landslide can turn it from the G. O. P. column. Moreover, Maine's isolated geographical location denies any pretense that it is typical. Finally, the Down Easters elect only State and Congressional officers in September and the election may therefore turn largely upon local issues.

It is especially desirable to keep the latter fact in mind in considering the political significance of the election today. Strictly speaking, the voters will not pass judgment on the New Deal. Gov. Brann, the Democratic candidate for Senator, has little more sympathy for the Roosevelt Administration than has Gov. Landon, as his address on Saturday night indicated. Mr. Brann is standing on his own record, trying to defend the New Deal only in very limited instances. His election to the Senate could not by any objective analyst be construed as a victory for the President in Maine.

In his reply to Gov. Landon, Gov. Brann made several effective points. But the net result of his speech was to emphasize the similarity between his own views and those of the G. O. P. candidate. Both defend State sovereignty; both emphasize the desirability of protecting individual freedom and of providing practical social security; both utilized Federal funds to aid their own States. It is difficult to follow the logic of Gov. Brann's criticism of Gov. Landon for accepting New Deal benefits in behalf of Kansas, when Mr. Brann, being also out of sympathy with the New Deal, followed the same course in Maine. When a relief policy has once been established in Washington, Governors will naturally subordinate their opinion of its social desirability in behalf of the immediate interests of their respective States.

Taken as a whole, this speech may be considered something of a barometer of political sentiment in Maine. When a Democratic Governor, who has made a good record and who is personally popular, draws so many parallels between his policies and those of the G. O. P. candidate, there is certainly added reason to accept the verdict of those unofficial polls which have been indicating a large Republican majority in Maine.

Even when all the cross-currents in this State election have been pointed out the fact remains that if the prospective Republican victory is decisive it will give a psychological boost to the candidacy of Landon and Knox. Thousands of voters in other parts of the country will not take the trouble to analyze the results. But many will be influenced by the general direction in which the tide seems to be running.

Especially the active political workers will find in the returns from Augusta new sources of courage or alarm, both of which will stimulate greater zeal in the national campaigns. That is why the Maine election always marks the beginning of the campaign wind-up.

Colossal Competition.

"Beauty," Struthers Burt once said, "is like the surf that never ceases." No one is in better position to vouch for this than the natives of Atlantic City. Every September they are treated to a stream of pulchritude, flowing into the Jersey Coast resort as regularly as the tides of the Atlantic. For the time at least all other attractions recede. Permanent waves take precedence over ocean waves. "Miss America" must, of course, look well in a swimming suit. But it is not at all necessary that she be able to distinguish a back stroke from an Australian crawl.

The Rotary Club and Father Neptune take turns at entertaining the young contestants. Eliminations are the order of the day and there are prizes for distinctive features, personality and coiffures. "Miss Outdoor Girl" is chosen for the way she wears sports togs, irrespective of whether she comes from the arid areas of Montana or the brick-lined valleys of the Bronx. Until the finals are over, Miss Keokuk is accorded the same royal treatment as Miss Manhattan. But once the winner is announced, the also-rans might as well crawl back into their chrysalises.

This year, however, "Miss America" was forced to share the headlines. Turning her well-turned back on Quebec's Ice Carnival, New Orleans' Sugar Bowl Classic, Nassau's Winter Vacation Land, and Pasadena's Tournament of Roses, "Miss Nebraska" immediately caught a plane for home. She declared she was homesick for Clay Center! Either "Miss Nebraska" is a most unusual girl or else Clay Center's Chamber of Commerce has got ideas which put to shame even those of Atlantic City.

A governmental bureau advises consumers to watch food prices. And get a crick in the neck.

Communism And Fascism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of September 10, Mr. William Preston takes issue with me about the root or cause of the atrocities in Spain. I have said that communism was that root; and I am still of the same mind. True, unheard of atrocities are committed by both sides. But anyone who has some knowledge at least of current history, knows that communism is hell-bent to bring chaos to nations by its revolutionary and sanguinary methods.

If communism had not been born, and if Russia had not provided an advantageous soil for its growth, there would be no fascism today. And if at present Communists would not attempt to destroy democratic governments, religion, human liberty and human life, there would be no Fascists pursuing them and engaging them in bloody and savage warfare. Then there would be no retaliation of atrocity for atrocity. Destroy communism and fascism will die a natural death. But as long as communism continues to create havoc within nations, there will be no peace, for fascism is the inveterate enemy of communism.

Again I repeat, I am not a Fascist, but an American, who prefers our democratic government, apart from its defects, to any other. I am not in sympathy with either of these "isms." But if I had to chose between communism and fascism, I certainly would not choose the former. JOSEPH E. GEDRA.

American Corn Laws.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Few names in England are held in greater respect than those of John Bright and Richard Cobden. They combined their efforts for the removal of the iniquitous corn laws. This was a measure of justice which in some degree removed the poverty of tfhe masses.

In America today we have the same unjustifiable tax upon corn, which is levied in the shape of a duty of 25 cents upon every bushel imported. It is calculated that 30,000,000 bushels will be imported this year from Holland, Brazil and other countries. This means a direct tax upon the people of $7,500,000, to which will be added a profit upon the tax as well as upon the corn itself.

Furthermore, the price of every bushel of corn sold in this country will be increased by this tariff, making it all an enormous burden upon the consumer for the supposed benefit of agriculture, which already enjoys enormous subsidies at the expense of the taxpayer.

Is it not about time for the American people to make practical application of that cherished democratic slogan, "Equal rights for all and special privileges to none?"

The Root Of War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent, Miss Anne Glushakow, entertains peculiar ideas on how to maintain peace in the world. Her illustrations about cave men ages and locking the doors of our houses are hardly apt to the case of big nations preparing to demolish each other in the name of nationalism, chauvinism and patriotism. It is true there have been many wars, but all of them were the result of "preparedness against war." However, prohibition doesn't prohibit and preparedness does not protect under unjust social orders where the rewards of society go to the greedy and honest endeavor is rewarded by poverty and repression, as a rule.

France has the right idea. Forming leagues for the protection of peace, not preparing for more war, is a better plan. Unfortunately, France has a record in the past for being a militaristic, "well-prepared" nation and as a result has been involved in most of the wars of history. Same with Britain, Germany, Italy and Spain.

Kings and dictators with unlimited powers for plunging nations into international massacres have been the curse of the world for ages. With France and Spain and Belgium going left, and with other nations such as Netherlands, Australia, Mexico, Uruguay, etc., moving steadily the same way, real democracy may be put into effect through Socialist principles of cooperation, and gradual elimination of capitalistic exploitation and competition which erroneous principles of human conduct were inherited from feudalism and always kept the world in turmoil.

The writer was brought up a conservative Republican, but after a scientific and conscientious study of history, current events and Socialist principles of international scope, he came to the conclusion that capitalism has served its purpose and must be retired soon or civilization will perish. Capitalism uses the war system to cover up its glaring sins of commission and omission. There is no real security for any nation so long as rival nations compete for world markets which capitalism itself destroyed by its ignorant and inept approach to world problems. Socialism puts Christian principles into actual operation, something which warring sects themselves are unable to do, without assistance from Socialist internationalists."

Business Or Government Baited.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of September 12, "Planning in Great Britain," you say that one reason the task of economic planning has been easier in Great Britain than in the United States is because of "the contrast between the British co-operation and the American sport of baiting 'economic royalists.'" Do not facts cited in your editorial, as well as the sneers and attacks of businessmen on the Government that appear daily in the newspapers, rather show that it is the businessmen's sport of baiting the Government that is responsible for the lack of co-operation?

The array of British legislative measures for the regulation and control of economic life in that country that you list in your editorial, is exactly the sort of "government interference with business" that is constantly under attack by businessmen and the business publications in this country. If you listen to Mr. Knox, or read the literature of the American Liberty League or the National Association of Manufacturers, you must know that every one of the measures that you say has been brought about by co-operation between British businessmen and their government has been attacked in this country as bureaucratic, dictatorial and un-American.

Five years ago an Ohio legislative commission on unemployment insurance, with which I was connected, recommended a State system of unemployment insurance with no Federal connection and with the very minimum of State participation. The Ohio Chamber of Commerce and the Ohio Manufacturers Association, representing organized business in the State, attacked the commission and its report in virulent language, charging them with being un-American and with trying to import into Ohio alien doctrines from abroad. The same method was used by the same business interests to defeat a modest old-age pension bill that was before the Ohio Legislature at several sessions. Only when the effects of the depression had aroused the people against these business interests did Ohio get an old-age pension law by a popular referendum of the voters.

This experience in Ohio is, of course, typical of what has been going on in most of our States. And when the depression made it necessary for the Federal Government to act on social and economic measures, the same organized business groups in the States combined and transferred their attacks to the Federal Government and Federal officers.

Can you imagine the Government of the United States undertaking to enact the kind of agricultural, industrial and transportation legislation that you seem to approve of in Great Britain without bringing down on its head imprecations from the organized business interests of the country?

You say that in Great Britain "no power exists for the compulsion of industrial agreements." Neither do any of the labor relations acts in this country compel industrial agreements. They do prohibit interference with the individual rights of employes to join a labor organization. If the British Parliament has not enacted such prohibitions into law, may that not be because British businessmen do not consider it to be one of their constitutional rights to interfere with the liberty of the employes to engage in associated action?

Anyone who has participated in movements for social betterment, or anyone who has followed the legislative history of any act that Congress or the State legislatures have found it necessary to adopt for the regulation of business, knows that the problem in this country is not Government baiting of business but on the contrary business baiting of Government. It seems to me that to change their tactics and to set an example of proper respect for the institutions of Government would be a little more to the point.

Rising Taxes Queried.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A headline in The Post of September 4 read "Relief Taxes in Maryland Exceed Quota."

That's cheerful enough for some people. However, an increase of $20 for the current year in taxes on a small property in which I live was unwelcome news to me and the affable county treasurer smilingly told me to wait until next year—that this was only the beginning, and see what taxes would be.

I am not able to figure out the increase unless it be Greenbelt, which takes Federal property out of taxation.

Old Hangover.

Ever since repeal, the whisky distillers have been working hard to establish a quick antiquity as a necessary background for their product. Any number of whiskies are called "Old Something-or-Other." The burden of their song is that an old, old whisky leaves you feeling in the pink the next day.

Our experience is that if you drink a lot of whisky at night, you feel terrible the next day, and by terrible we mean mighty bad. Although we don't hold out for truth in advertising, we don't see why whisky distillers don't admit this fact; they should not only admit, they should capitalize it. Hard drinkers flaunt their hangovers as a mark of hardihood, and a forthright distillation called "Old Delirium," or "Old Vapors," or "Old We're Going to Feel Pretty Bad Tomorrow, Pal," would probably be a good seller.

This bringing up our children to believe that the more liquor you drink at night, the dearer your head will be the next day, is dangerous to society. One of the toughest chores a man faces is reading a whisky ad on the day he has a hangover: he thinks there must be something wrong, either with his duodenum or his wine merchant.

The Post Impressionist

From The Globe To The Screen.

Post Office, Monday.

EXCELLENT actor in his stage days, now a discriminating scholar in the Congressional Library, Claus Bogel last week began a letter to the Column, about the screen's new "Romeo and Juliet," with this quotation: "Can such things be, and overcome us like a summer's cloud, without our special wonder?"

"The best performance," says Bogel, "was that of Kokler; he plays 'Friar Laurence' as a kind-hearted old boy having humor and cunning. Aubrey Smith made a splendid 'Capulet;' and Rathbone, though hardly the 'firey' Tybalt, wasn't bad. But, if Edna May Oliver was the 'Nurse,' the 'Nurse' was E. M. Oliver. And Barrymore's 'Mercutio?' Far too ponderous . . . Norma Shearer does her best, yet is merely Norma trying to play 'Juliet' —reads her lines in a series of jerks. Leslie Howard is the worst 'Romeo' I've ever known . . .

"Subtle bit of artistry—the introduction of the lovers' first marital squabble: their dispute (for dispute their tones make it) as to whether it is the nightingale or the lark that's raising hell out in the trees . . . No matter how the balcony scene was slashed: with Howard as 'Romeo,' all the speeches might have been eliminated . . . I prefer Shakespeare unadulterated."

After reading this letter, your columnist went to the show—to scoff. He remained to pray.

* * *

Yes, the actors do some things that, had director Zukor secured the Post-Impressionist's advice, would have been done otherwise: in as many as three important lines emphasis falls on the least important word. But, echoing, all Bogel's phrases about Kokler, Aubrey Smith and Rathbone, I'd add that, if the "Nurse" is Miss Oliver, she is so because prophetic Shakespeare made her so.

To me it seemed:

That Barrymore's "Mercutio" was what it ought to be—bombastic.

That Howard's enunciation in the almost unactable "Romeo" role compensated for his physique's occasional betrayal of more maturity than one expects from the impulsive Montague.

And that Miss Shearer improved on most "Juliets" by conveying her more rhapsodic lines so as to have them received, not as if they were somebody else's romantic verse repeated by a sentimental schoolgirl, but as if they weren't spoken at all—I felt as if I were reading the thoughts of a genuine "Juliet" which she herself couldn't actually put into words.

Certainly the close-ups are of doubtful value; certainly the friar's cell is over-elaborated—for a cell of that epoch. And, were this columnist impelled to carp, he'd say that the light on "Juliet's" head when she first enters the balcony is too much like an aureole—that the old stage tradition of the dropped scarf should have been observed—that the garden is overspacious for "Romeo" to traverse it undetected, and, on his second retreat, too full of sunshine.

But the point is that this picture doesn't impel the average spectator to carp. And the point is that Shakespeare wrote for the average spectator.

From the prologue-epilogue birds'-eye-view of Verona—the Veronese atmosphere.

From the ball scene and the crowded street scenes—the atmosphere of the era.

From the daring interpolation of "Romeo's" wild ride out of Mantua—the state of that horseman's mind which alone gives literary inevitability to his action in the tomb.

None of these effects could be won, for a modern audience, by any elaboration of the dialogue—and any elaboration of the dialogue would be abominable. None of these effects could be so completely won for a modern audience by any device on any modern stage. Yet these are all effects that—it is quite obvious, once you have experienced them—Shakespeare wanted you to get: evperiences that Elizabethan audiences probably got, because the very simplicity of their theaters had educated their imaginations to a degree from which the imagination of the modern audience has fallen far away.

This "Romeo and Juliet" is supremely far ahead of any other screen attempt at Shakespeare—precisely because it is not an "adulteration" of Shakespeare, but a realization of him. And, precisely because its few faults are so evident, it contains a promise of their ultimate remedy: a promise of still fuller realizations yet to come.

As the lights went down upon the last scene the other night, a modernistic member of the audience expressed the significance of both performance and promise:

"When you come to think of it," said he, "Shakespeare really wrote for the screen."

Fair Enough

Americans in Germany.

For more than a year a native American sailor named Lawrence Simpson, of Kirkland, Wash., has been held in prison in Germany, awaiting trial on a charge of possessing seditious documents which are said to have been found in his locker aboard an American ship in Hamburg. Under the German law any ordinary American newspaper containing an editorial criticizing the Nazi idea may be described as seditious.

There are possibly a hundred American books, entirely legal in American territory, including, of course, the crew's quarters of an American ship in a foreign port, which are seditious in Germany. Any document which compares democracy to Hitlerism to the disadvantage of the latter is seditious in German territory, and even a copy of the United States Constitution could be so considered.

The case against Simpson has not been fully disclosed in the dispatches published in this country, but if the American passport means anything at all it should protect an American citizen from long imprisonment without trial on such a charge in any country having diplomatic relations with ours.

The American Embassy in Berlin is remarkably bashful about protecting the rights of Americans in such cases, and the situation has grown worse since George Messersmith, the Consul General in Berlin, was moved over to Vienna as minister.

Mr. Messersmith was diligent to protect Americans in Germany, and he tangled with the Nazi officials so often in such matters that they were glad to see him go. Mr. Messersmith reckoned that an American in Germany should be entitled to the same rights and privileges that a German Nazi enjoys in the United States, where Nazis band together and often hold public meetings to denounce American public officials and glorify the Nazi system to the implied detriment of the American system of government.

Of course, Americans in Germany do not attempt to hold meetings to denounce Hitler or Streicher or Goebbels, nor do they attempt to preach democracy and sneer at Naziism. On the whole, they are content to mind their own business and not interfere in the affairs of the German nation, which is more than can be said of the Nazis in the United States.

It would seem that if the Nazis have any legitimate case against the American sailor they should be able to go to court and get the thing done. In fact, if the sailor were a British subject, carrying the blue passport of the British Foreign Office, that is what they would have done long ago, because the British have a method of picking up a Nazi in their country whenever a Briton is tossed into a German jail and treating him just as rough as the Germans treat their man

This plan has been remarkably effective, and the Nazis do not pick up British subjects any more unless they have evidence of genuine criminal activity. The British do not accept mere distaste for Naziism as criminal activity on the part of their subjects in Germany.

Under the German laws Americans have no security at all, because they are supposed to be subject to the same risks that affect Germans. This means that an American could be picked up and locked away in a concentration camp or prison for life on the mere word of a jealous competitor or malicious neighbor that he was overheard to say that democracy is better than Naziism.

That is the theoretical extreme, of course, but it exists in the German laws, and the question is just how far the Nazis are to be allowed to go in applying those laws to Americans in their country.

Meanwhile, the Nazis vigorously maintain that German ships in our ports are German territory, and within the last week have reaffirmed the idea that a Nazi who has been naturalized in this country remains, nevertheless, a German.

In a recent court case in New York an official of a German steamship company, a naturalized American, testified that he, nevertheless, owed allegiance to Adolf Hitler, but his citizenship was not challenged so far as the newspaper report shows.

It should not be difficult, if the American Embassy in Berlin is at all interested in protecting the rights of Americans and the prestige of the American passport, to compel the immediate trial of the American sailor. If the documents were not evidence of a conspiracy against the German government the embassy should get him out of prison and obtain compensation for his year and more in jail without trial.

The mere possession aboard an American ship of some paper or book analyzing Hitlerism or denouncing the atrocities of the regime—a document which would be legal in this country—should not be accepted as ground for imprisonment. If the same principles were enforced against the Nazis in America they would all be in prison.

1 Dead, 1 Dying In Plane Crackup

Pittsburgh, Sept. 13 (U.P.).—Sidney Messner, 27, pilot, was killed today and Charles Krops, 28, was injured seriously when a plane owned by a Pittsburgh club crashed at the Conway, Pa., airport near here.

Krops was reported dying in nearby Rochester General Hospital.

Messner was the brother of Mrs. William R. Walsh, of 121 Myrtle street, Alexandria, Va., and had visited Washington frequently.

William Walsh, attorney for the National Labor Relations Board and brother-in-law of the crash victim, said last night that Messner had been an aviation enthusiast for a long time and had flown to Washington.

Messner lived in Pittsburgh, according to Walsh, and managed the estate of his father.

In The Empire State

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

SOME ONE (possibly Adam) with a gift for coining phrases has aptly remarked that this is a strange world, after all. Here, now, is the Empire State—original roost of the Roosevelt, birthplace of the New Deal and buttressed by Democratic pluralities as big as the Alps—turned almost overnight into the battleground of the Republic. Whether they say so or not, both parties believe that whoever wins New York wins the election. Forty-seven and a half blue chips is quite a drop in the electoral pot.

And the strangest part of it is that as this trusty typewriter clatters into action Landon is credited with the edge. It's a narrow edge, admittedly. Is it sharp enough to cut this Dew Deal deck?

Of course, it is the old fight of up-State against down-State. The Republicans claim huge gains north of the Bronx—a tidal wave to 750,000—and the straw votes support them. Sunny Jim Farley concedes nothing, but his claim to maintain the up-State Roosevelt-Lehman vote at the 1932 level sounds somewhat falsetto. There is no doubt that New York City will go New Deal by a spanking plurality. But how spanking? Will it spank as hard as 850,000? When it comes to simple arithmetic like that the dumb gods are mute.

Gentleman Jim also says that his city plurality will not fall short of 1932. But it is unreasonable to suppose that if there are Democratic losses up-State they will not be reflected in the city vote, too. Moreover there are several special situations in the metropolis scarcely designed to attract all good men to the aid of the party. Farley pouts these airily aside. He points to the radical trend of the first voters and accession of the pink Labor Party as a complete offset. But whatever votes the Labor Party tallies will be largely subtracted from the Democrats anyhow. And through all the miasmatic mist of misinformation the sore spots continue to loom.

Tammany Sure to Care For Its Own Striped Hide.

THE FIRST is Tammany. What will Tammany do? The surest thing that Tammany will do is to look after its own striped hide. Tammany, bred in the slums, has never learned to love that Groton boy. My own talks among the braves indicate that plenty of the elder warriors will sink their tommyhawks into every New Deal totem they can reach. They are old-line conservatives—provided they can continue to get theirs at the city bin. Tammany Catholics (and the leadership is all Catholic) are chill to both Roosevelt and Lehman. They say the Governor has favored Jews in his appointments. Officially, Tammany is and will be for Roosevelt and the national ticket. But in many a cosy little tepee the old scalping knife is being doggedly whetted.

The second sore spot is that in which Lehman finds himself. The background is too complex for more than a sketch here. But in one of the grubby Brooklyn gang wars the Messrs. Luckman bumped off a Mr. Druckman, a truckman. And believe it or not, the police inspector assigned to the case was Bruckman. The charge is made that District Attorney Geoghan, a Tammany stalwart, and all his assistants had nailed large 'For Sale' signs on their office doors. Now Mr. Geoghan insists that is not so, that he is a little more than 100 per cent honest. But he failed to function in the Druckman case. Nevertheless, it refused to stay buried and began to smell most malodorously.

Governor Lehman was obliged to supersede the Brooklyn district attorney (who incidentally is just the kind of a guy Brooklyn wants) with an unperturbed and painfully nosey lawyer named Hiram Todd. Todd promptly convicted the Druckman murderers. And then, unkindly, he called on the Governor to try Geoghan, largely for consorting with a notorious criminal, slot machine magnate and fixer named Leo Byk. Now Byk's name fits snugly into almost any sort of a headline and there were plenty of headlines. But at the time the Governor wasn't planning to run again and it seemed that wherever the political consequences of a trial might fall it wouldn't be on his head.

But Roosevelt and Farley, being even then considerably worried about the ball game on the old home grounds, kidded the Governor into changing his mind about a third term. Changing your mind in public is always a dangerous gesture in politics. The the Geoghan trial continued to push painfully into the foreground. The Governor is in the midst of it now and he must feel very much like Robert Benchley's "My Ten Years in a Quandry." Whatever decision he makes he will be damned if he does and damned if he doesn't. There is no political percentage in it at all. As an aid to a rousing plurality it just makes you sick.

Roosevelt and Farley Urged Lehman to Reconsider.

THAT'S PART of the picture from the Democratic side. But don't imagine there is nothing but pie in the sky for the Republicans. They are in a dither, too. They admit there was a slump in Landon's chances during August and they are harried with wonder as to whether the rising tide of prosperity is checking the tide of opposition to Roosevelt. Their chief comfort is the straw ballots which Farley can't contemplate with any pleasure, but these always lag a month or more behind the actual opinion of the people.

Whatever effect it produced in Maine the revelation that the Morgans, the Rockefellers and the Duponts were throwing money into Augusta didn't do the Republicans a particle of good in New York City. Theoretically and logically, Mr. Dupont spends his money to elect a certain candidate in Maine, as he has a perfect right to do, whereas Farley spends your money and mine to elect a certain other candidate, which he has no right whatever to do. At least 50 per cent of the millions poured into Maine by the Administration is commonly supposed to have been used for political purposes.

But the Liberty League which the Duponts support and the Morgans are presumed to favor has been too well smeared here. Al Smith has been smeared right out as a political factor in his own home town. New Yorkers look on him as a Lost Leader who left them just for an Empire State building to stick in his coat. They just can't seem to remember that it was Raskob and the Duponts who made the Democratic challenge in 1928 possible.

One of the newer hopes of the Republicans is the rally of the radical groups around Roosevelt, including the Communists. They believe firmly that the country is not radical and is getting less so as conditions improve. Whether or not he organized it, it is becoming more apparent that Mr. Roosevelt leads a sort of Popular Front, similar to the parties which brought strife and discord into France and Spain. Perhaps there was a chance for a revolution in 1932. There is none in 1936. It really isn't a year for revolutionary heroes.

Therefore the Landon leadership is reasonably content to have Mr. Roosevelt paraphrase the famous remark of Gen. Foch at the battle of the Marne: "My right is destroyed; my center is shattered; I shall attack with my left."

Longest Novel

By William Lyon Phelps.

"Gone With the Wind" is the longest novel of the season; tomorrow I shall discuss the shortest. Both are good. Length, breadth, and thickness may be useful in mathematics, but it is only the fourth dimension that counts in literature. A short novel may be too long; and a very long one may not suffer from its dimensions. In the eighteenth century Richardson wrote a novel that filled eight thick volumes, "Clarissa Harlowe." It is an immortal work of art, and it is not too long because every attempt to condense it has been a failure.

* * * *

On the other hand, when a lady, a number of years ago, sent her new novel to Ambrose Bierce, and requested him to send her a brief criticism of it, he wrote, "Madame, the covers of your book are too far apart."

* * * *

"Gone With the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell, of Atlanta (published by the Macmillan Co., New York) is the third recent novel of the South that has had immense success. The other two were "Lamb in His Bosom," by Caroline Miller, and "So Red the Rose," by Stark Young.

The social life in our Southern States before the Civil War was romantic and picturesque, and lends itself admirably to literary treatment In "Gone With the Wind" the first quarter of the book is the best. The picture of the Southern aristocracy, the only feudal system we have ever had in America, is marvellously well drawn.

Digest's Polls Fail to Portray Clear Picture

Car And Telephone Users Not True Indication Of Voting Trend.

The American Institute of Public Opinion polls, the outstanding organization in the country in scientifically gauging convictions of citizens, appears exclusively in Washington in The Post. But other newspapers in various parts of the country are conducting interesting polls. So The Post has appointed Claude E. Robinson, noted author of "Straw Votes—A Study of Political Prediction," to write a series of articles analyzing all straw votes taken in America. This is the fourth article of a series to run until the November election.

In a previous article analyzing the Literary Digest Presidential polls, it was shown that, in the past, the Digest figures have uniformly and consistently overestimated the Republican vote.

This was true in four States out of five in the 1916 poll, 41 out of 48 in the 1924 canvass, 48 out of 48 in the straw vote of 1928 and 34 out of 48 in the poll for 1932.

If this experience is any criterion for the current election, the odds are approximately seven to one that for any State chosen at random, the Digest will report a larger proportion of the straw vote for Landon than the Republican candidate will subsequently receive in the November election.

Readers interested in The Post's $1,000 Presidential poll contest will find information in this story useful.

If the 1932 experience be considered more analogous to the present situation so far as Republican distortion in the sample is concerned, the odds are better than three to one that in any State chosen at random, the Digest figures will be inflated for the Republican candidate.

The practical result of this distortion is that, in forecasting the electoral vote, the Literary Digest is likely to misplace those States which Roosevelt wins by a small margin. Since the number of States now placed in the doubtful zone by political observers is large, this flaw in the Digest polling machinery may be dramatically exposed when the official vote is counted.

The greater the number of States Roosevelt wins by a small margin, the greater will be the Digest's error in forecasting the electoral vote.

The Republican distortion evident in the Presidential polls of the Literary Digest in the past is not in any sense a result of the editorial policy of the magazine, for the Digest is strictly impartial in the conduct of the canvass.

Cause Is Statistical.

The cause is wholly a statistical one having its roots in the makeup of the sample. This will become clear in the paragraphs that follow.

The Literary Digest gathers its straw ballots entirely by mail. The mailing list employed is drawn principally from telephone directories and automobile registration lists, but these names form only a small part of the sample.

The Literary Digest poll, therefore, is a canvass, not of the whole electorate, but of the telephone and automobile owning portion of the electorate, giving the returns the political bias of voters in the higher income levels.

People who do not own a telephone or an automobile are excluded from participation in the straw vote, which means that low income voters are not represented in the Digest sample in correct proportion to their voting strength.

Rich for Republicans.

We know that the Literary Digest has consistently overestimated the Republican vote and that the sample is overweighted with people in the higher income groups. It would appear, therefore, that high income voters tend to align themselves with the Republican Party whereas low income voters tend to support the Democratic Party.

It is fair to say that the Digest overestimates the Republican vote because its sample includes a greater proportion of voters of Republican persuasion than there are in the official electorate.

This analysis is supported by evidence of somewhat more direct character furnished by the current tabulations of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

This organization segregates its ballots by three income groups, the upper, the middle and lower one-third. The upper one-third comprise ballots drawn from owners of telephones.

Higher Income Status.

While it is true that not all people who own telephones are wealthy, it is certainly a fact that high income voters are telephone owners and that telephone owners represent a higher income status than nontelephone owners.

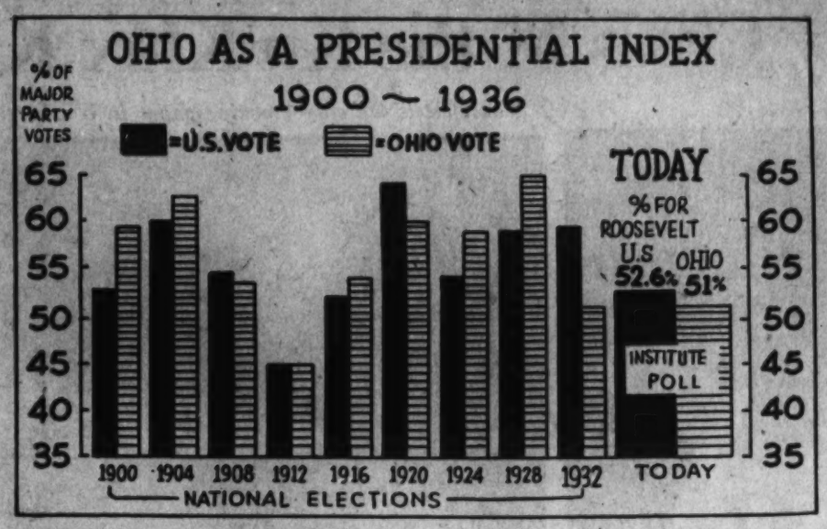
The lower one-third includes ballots voted by people on relief and in poor residential districts. The returns from the upper one-third income group for the country-at-large show Landon polling 59 per cent to Roosevelt's 41 per cent.

In the lower one-third income group, Roosevelt polls 70 per cent of the total and Landon 30 per cent. Among people on relief the Institute reports Roosevelt even stronger, 82 per cent of these voters favoring the President, with only 18 per cent lining up with the Republican candidate.

It seems clear, therefore, that the principal cause of the Republican distortion in the Digest returns is the restriction of participants to high income voters who are predominantly Republican, and the exclusion of low income voters who tend to align themselves with the Democrats.

One qualification of this explanation should be made. In the States south of the Mason-Dixon line, the Literary Digest overestimates the Republican vote the same as in the North.

The high income voters in the South who own telephones and automobiles are not Republican but Democratic. According to the principle outlined above, the Digest theoretically should overestimate the Democratic vote in the South, just as it overestimates the Republican vote in the North, but this is not the case.



Ohio has been on the winning side in every presidential election since the McKinley-Bryan battle of 1900. The above table shows how closely the national vote and the Ohio vote have compared in the last 32 years, as well as the strength indicated for President Roosevelt there in the latest Institute of Public Opinion poll.

Ohio Vote 'Right' Since 1900

It Tops Maine As Index To Presidential Vote, Records Show.

Political attention centers on Maine today as the voters of that State ballot in the first general elections of 1936. Both sides will scan returns to see whether they can claim November victory on the basis of the Maine result. The following special article reveals that Ohio has been a more dependable Presidential index than Maine and reports the latest Institute of Public Opinion survey there.

By Dr. George Gallup,
American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Sept. 13.—Despite the opportunities for political thunder that will come out of the State of Maine following tomorrow's election there, strategists of both parties could well afford to turn their attention Westward towards Ohio.

"As Goes Maine," is the first half of a political axiom which is only partly true. History shows that the second half of the axiom—"So Goes the Nation—" has been true when the Republicans won Maine by a big majority, or when the Democrats eked out a victory.

Readers interested in The Post's $1,000 Presidential poll contest will find information in this story useful.

But when the Republicans win by a smaller-than-ordinary majority in Maine the National election may tip either way.

Ohio is a better index than Maine. Ohio has cast its electoral votes for the winning Presidential candidate in every election since 1900. If you could have forecast the Ohio winner correctly in any Presidential year since the turn of the century, the form books show, you would have been forecasting the Nation-wide winner as well.

Today Ohio voters are 51 per cent for Roosevelt, 49 per cent for Landon in the latest National poll of the Institute of Public Opinion. If Ohio remains as good an index as in former Presidential years, in other words, Roosevelt would be re-elected today.

This confirms the Nation-wide trend as shown in Institute polls, which give Roosevelt 52.6 per cent of the major party vote at present to 47.4 per cent for Landon. Roosevelt would carry 28 States, with a total of 275 electoral votes, while Landon would carry 20 States with 256.

Ohio on Borderline.

Yet the situation in Ohio is by no means safe for the Democrats. A lead of only 51 per cent to 49 per cent means a difference of only a few thousand votes. It is the same margin by which Roosevelt led Herbert Hoover in Ohio in 1932. In that election Roosevelt polled 1,301,000 votes to 1,227,000 votes for Hoover there.

Recent institute polls, moreover, emphasize the doubtful November alignment of Ohio, for the State has see-sawed from Republican to Democratic twice in the past five months. In April, Institute ballots showed Ohio narrowly on the Republican side of the line; by June the State was slightly Democratic in tinge. Following Landon's nomination in Cleveland, the State tipped toward the G. O. P. again. The following table shows how the changes have occurred:

	Percent Favoring
Ohio	Dem.	Rep.
April	49%	51%
May	50	50
June	51	49
July	47	53
Aug. 9	48	52
Aug. 23	50—	50+
September	51	49

If Roosevelt can hold Ohio, with its 26 electoral votes, he can win again—assuming that the two candidates hold their present margins elsewhere unchanged. But if Landon can capture Ohio while keeping his other advantages secure he will add 26 electoral votes to his own column and subtract the same number from Roosevelt's. Such a shift would give Landon a 282 to 249 lead in electoral votes. The campaign today is just as close as that hypothesis suggests.

It is improbable, of course, that the candidates will keep their holdings in the other States entirely without change until election. New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Michigan are other big States where flux may occur, and where a slight shift toward Roosevelt might give him the election in a bag. Yet neither party can ignore wedge-shaped Ohio, half agricultural and half industrial, with its rich prize of electoral votes.

The next report in Ohio's standing, as well as the most recent vote in the other 47 States, will be revealed Sunday as the result of another Nation-wide Institute poll in The Washington Post.

Called Every Election.

Sometimes the winner's percentage in Ohio has been greater than that he received throughout the country at large, as in 1900 when the State gave its native son, William McKinley, 59 per cent of the vote while the McKinley average throughout the United States was 53 per cent. Another example was 1928, when Ohio rolled up a 65 per cent vote for Herbert Hoover against Gov. Smith as compared to a 58 per cent vote for Hoover in the Nation at large.

In 1912 the Nation was 45 per cent for Woodrow Wilson and Ohio's vote was likewise 45 per cent for Wilson.

Three other States which share Ohio's record of voting on the "right" side of every election since 1900 are Kansas, North Dakota and Wyoming. In none of these States, however, has there been such a spectacular parallel with the national vote as in Ohio.

Rules of Post's Ballot Contest Are Explained

Entrants Must Submit 250-Word Prediction of Election Winner.

NAME: The Washington Post's 1936 America Speaks Presidential Poll Contest.

PURPOSE: To encourage interest and study on the part of the public in methods of measuring public opinion on important national issues.

REQUIREMENTS: Each contestant must write a letter of 250 words, or less, describing his, or her, method and material used, between now and October 30, in arriving at predictions on:

RULES: 1. It is not necessary that contestants be subscribers to The Washington Post. (Copies of AMERICA SPEAKS polls, special articles on election trends in various parts of the country and other similar material of assistance to the contestant, may be obtained at The Washington Post Building, in The Post library, or in copies of The Post on file at the various public libraries.)

PRIZES: First, $500.00. Second, $200.00. Third, $100.00. Fourth, $50.00. Fifth Prize to Thirty-fourth Prize, $5.00 each.

INSTRUCTIONS: It is suggested that contestants read the results of Nation-wide polls on the comparative standings of the two major party candidates with the voters of the country, taken by the American Institute of Public Opinion and published exclusively in Washington in The Washington Post. The first Landon-Roosevelt America Speaks poll was published July 12; the second, August 9; third, August 23; fourth, September 6. Other polls, indicating the current strength of each candidate in each of the 48 States, will be published in The Washington Post Sunday, September 20; Sunday, October 4, and Sunday, October 18.

These polls, scientifically conducted, will indicate the trend of public sentiment for each of the candidates between now and the election, will measure the "shift" from one candidate to the other.

It is also suggested that contestants consult the special articles appearing in The Post from time to time, written by Claude E. Robinson, analyzing various other national election polls and straw votes and their significance. Also, of value to the contestant will be The Post's regular, daily and Sunday, political articles, political news stories, midweek releases from the American Institute of Public Opinion on the voting trends in various States and sections of the country, Franklyn Waltman's daily column, "Politics and People," and various other Post political features, increasing in number as the date of the election nears.

For the information of contestants, The Post will publish each day, from now until October 30, a regular Contest Column, in which questions of contestants will be answered and material of special interest to contestants, appearing in The Post that day, will be noted. The Contest Column will be indexed on Page 1 of The Post daily.

N. Y. Squealer In Graft Inquiry Slain in Store

Joseph Rosen Shot Down by Four Men in Brooklyn Candy Shop.

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 13.—Four guns fired 15 bullets into a little Brooklyn candy store today, a 46-year-old man pitched forward on his face, and the underworld had answered Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey's racket investigation with bullets and blood.

"Murder!" screamed Louis Stanler, a butcher, in his shop five doors down the street.

That's what it was, the police decided, when they arrived and turned over Joseph Rosen's body on the floor. It was not the first time the police had heard of Rosen. Five months ago, they said, he went to Dewey and offered to tell what he knew about Brooklyn rackets. He was killed today, detectives said, because he was a "squealer."

There were 15 bullets in Rosen's body. Stanler said four men had done the shooting. Detectives took to police headquarters Rosen's wife, Esther, and two daughters, Sylvia, 23, and Judith, 7, but were unable to get any information from them. They left under the guard of detectives.

Rosen had been unemployed for two years. Formerly he was in a clothing business which was dissolved two years ago.

3 Young Actors Star in Making 'Devil a Sissy'

Bartholomew, Cooper and Rooney Swing Film; Ruggles Steps Out.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 13.—Shows of the week . . . "The Devil Is a Sissy," (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

A moralizing melodrama for youngsters lifted out of its class by excellent performances of Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney. Grown-ups, if they are not too critical, will find it entertaining, and perhaps touching.

Rooney and Cooper play a couple of tough New York street boys and Bartholomew an English lad thrown in their company because his parents are divorced and there is nobody to look after him properly.

The tough two give Freddie the cold shoulder because they think he's soft, but permit him to join them when he suggests a burglary of his own mother's home. The lads go in for crime to raise money to buy a tombstone for Rooney's faather, an executed gangster.

They are captured, of course, and haled to the juvenile courts, the rest of the picture dealing with straightening out their young lives.

Title comes of the saving doctrine presented the boys that there is no honor playing ball with Mr. Satan, because he can't take it in the pinches. Seems Lucifer was once an angel, but turned yellow and quit because the job was tough.

W. S. Van Dyke can take plenty of bows for smart directing of the boys. In some ways their work is the best to date for any of the three.

Best scene: Freddie, third degreed by detectives, brazening in his treble pipe: "I won't talk."

"Wives Never Know" (Paramount.)

The firm of Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland turn out another rather foolish but amusing comedy, aided and abetted by Droll Adolphe Menjou.

Ruggles is a wool-gathering botanist happily married to a comfortably middle-aged wife (Boland), until Menjou comes to town as a goofy but celebrated writer of the women's club lecturing type and talks them out of it.

An old college mate of Ruggles, Menjou moves in as house guest and persuades Boland she has deprived her husband of happiness by not permitting him to paint the town red occasionally. Conversely he convinces Ruggles his wife is missing something in life because she never has a chance to "forgive" him.

Accordingly, Ruggles shocks his little Kansas home town by stepping out with a famous stage "vampire," Vivenne Osborne, frequenting speakeasies (which they still have in Kansas) and so forth. Spying on Ruggles, Boland is caught in a raid, adding to the scandal.

Payoff comes, however, when Menjou becomes Ruggles' rival for the vamp's attention, and comes down with a case of jealousy. There's a fight. Ruggles tosses Menjou off a porch, and Menjou, thinking he's about to die, marries Osborne.

Best shot: Menjou, discovering what he thought was his backbone sticking through his skin, is really one of Ruggles', pet rose bushes.

Gayety

"BEAUTY PARADE," Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 23 scenes, produced by Paul Markoff; starring Ann Corio, supported by Manny King, Johnny Barry, Charles Harris, Bobby Taylor, Murray Green, Harry Kane, Bea Keller, Evelyn Brooks, Rose Turo, Elsa Lang, Jean Harris and ensemble. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

Greeted with a explosive outburst of applause the like of which has not been heard for three seasons—and the like, probably, she has never before received—Ann Corio appeared yesterday to headline the "Beauty Parade," as fine a show as you would care to see in any theater, and to achieve a personal triumph beyond the most sanguine expectations of those who consider her incontestably the No. 1 woman of burlesque.

While Miss Corio's reception was highly deserved, and her subsequent work better than ever, she, however capable of so doing, does not have to carry the entire show, as has been the case at times. Indeed, here in the "Beauty Parade" is a show without a star, for the good and sufficient reason that everyone of the principals is, in his own right, a star: Manny ("I Musta Haffa Go.") King, Johnny ("I'll Kill 'Em") Barry, Evelyn Brooks, and all the others.

With "Kunnel" Jimmy Lake in rare good form, furnishing the offstage comments during her act, Miss Corio once more displays those talents than which no other burlesque artist has been so generously endowed: beautiful to look upon, disarming in personality, with utmost finesse of performance, she goes through her numbers — two of them—with consumate artistry and, if one can be so crass, showmanship.

Messrs. Barry and King, associated, respectively, with whom are Charles Harris and Bobby Taylor, as the straight men, furnish many moments of swell comedy, fast and funny.

Brunettish Evelyn Brooks and blonde Honey Bee Keller contribute other tantalizing routines which, in their particular manner of working, form fine variations to the general theme. They also work several of the scenes.

Two unusual teams grace the Gayety stage this week, teams which would do honor to any so-called big-time revue: Murray Green and Elsa Lang, singers, and Harry Kane and Jean Harris, dancers. Of rare voice, rich and powerful, the Green-Lang duo offer several number unique to the burlesque stage and, through the sheer artistry of performance, are tumultuously greeted.

The Kane-Harris team present ballroom, adagio, and apache numbers with equal precision and finesse, to give the program a touch of real class. One might also mention the song and dance by Rose Turo whose efforts with the ballet contributes yet another novelty. And the ensemble, too, is much above the average which may be the result of the swell work of Paul Markoff who is credited with the production of this show. The staging by Impresario Lake reaches a new high.

All of which adds up to this: "Beauty Parade" is a swell show, one of which all concerned may well be proud and one which will indeed be difficult to equal.

About The Showshops

(With Gerald G. Gross, Batting for Nelson B. Bell)

"GIVE US THIS NIGHT," the new picture at the Belasco, reintroduces the singing voices of Jan Kiepura and Gladys Swarthout to their screen public as it plods through a rehash of the trite story about the boy and girl who are parted by misunderstanding only to be reunited happily in the end.

In the matter of plot, the operetta of Lafayette Square is close kin to the current feature at RKO-Keith's "Swing Time," among others. Both stake their chances of success on the vocal and pedal gifts, respectively, of their stars, trusting that deficiencies in the narrative will be overcome, if not overlooked, by good singing and ingenious dancing.

Heralded by Paramount as "the first full-length operetta written expressly for the screen," "Give Us This Night" is about an Italian fisherman (Kiepura) whose loud tenor is discovered by a prima donna (Swarthout). They fall in love, only to part when Kiepura is led to believe she prefers the maestro (Philip Merivale). Things are righted eventually, of course, and the climax finds the lovers wowing a Naples audience in the operatic version of "Romeo and Juliet."

If Erich Wolfgang Korngold's music was distinguished, thus removing the film's worst handicap, "Give Us This Night" might induce us to look with charitable tolerance upon the hackneyed plot as the Astaire-Rogers routines in "Swing Time" succeed in doing. If "I Mean to Say I Love You," presumably the theme song, were something you went out humming, the Kiepura-Swarthout vehicle might be redeemed. It would have helped if the comedy were funnier but there, also, aside from Alan Mowbray's too infrequent appearances as an intoxicated tenor, the picture falls down.

Shattered box-office and attendance records at the Earle over Friday and Saturday would seem to besmirch this observer's opinion, which is not altered, that "Anthony Adverse" fails to earn 2 hours and 20 minutes of one's time. John J. Payette, Warner Brothers' zone manager, yesterday announced the Friday-Saturday marks formerly held by "Forty-Second Street," "Gold Diggers of 1933" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" were eclipsed by "Anthony." Not only were the customers willing to sit through 140 minutes of a single feature, but 500 of them were standing in line when the box office opened at 9 a. m. Friday for the first showing. So, to meet the demand, the Earle today will revert to the extended schedule that prevailed on Friday, with "Anthony" being presented six times beginning at 9:15 a. m.

More fuel for controversy is supplied by two letters reaching this desk, both written by gentlemen associated with libraries and both pertaining to "Romeo and Juliet."

"If you know anything at all about acting—and since you are presumably a critic you should know something about it—how in the name of all that is holy can you presume to make the statements you do regarding the Romeo of Leslie Howard?"

So begins Claus Bogel, of the Library of Congress, taking issue with our expressed belief that Mr. Howard, save that he lacks youth's impetuosity, is quite satisfactory in his role. He continues:

"I have admired Mr. Howard in many of the parts I have seen him play . . . but as Romeo he is, in my estimation, the —— —— failure I ever saw . . . His reading of Shakespeare is execrable (sic) . . .Where was his fury?"

Dr. Joseph Quincy Adams, director of the Folger Shakespeare Library, writes:

"The . . . production of 'Romeo and Juliet' seemed to be immeasurably superior to anything of a similar kind hitherto attempted by the moving picture industry. To the lover of Shakespeare it will prove eminently satisfactory . . . the acting, with unimportant exceptions, is all that could be desired."

Carter Barron, harking back to his football days at Georgia Tech, foresees many touchdowns in the next twelve-month at the Palace, Capitol and Columbia.

"The movies," says the Loew boss for this area, "have reached a new peak in entertainment and artistic production, and the new movie year, which was ushered in with the world premiere of 'The Gorgeous Hussy,' promises to eclipse anything we've ever had before."

As exhibits in the making of his case, he cites "The General Dies at Dawn" and "The Road to Glory," next attractions at the Palace and Capitol, respectively, and the following films which are more distant:

"His Brother's Wife," with Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck; "The Great Ziegfeld" at popular prices; the Technicolored "Garden of Allah" starring Marlene Dietrich, Wallace Beery's "Old Hutch," the musicals, "Maytime," "Born to Dance," "Broadway Melody of 1937," and "The Big Broadcast of 1937;" Garbo's "Camille" with Robert Taylor as her Armand; the Marx brothers in "A Day at the Races," and a flock of others which will be awaited with great expectation.

Sounds fine, Mr. Barron.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Sept. 13.

Stories About the Pictures You're Seeing.

"The General Died At Dawn." Clifford Odets, Broadway's new great hope of the American theater, came to Hollywood and took a movie job. This was then considered news. For it was printed that "Odets was selling out." It is the old-fashioned idea about Hollywood. Today the best talents in every entertainment division are in the celluloid city, and they are turning out work comparable to the best of the stage, often superior to it.

A production of "Romeo and Juliet" costing $2,000,000 must outshine any stage production costing, say, $50,000. Or the movies can take a current stage play, such as "Winterset," sign the star performers, Margo and Burgess Meredith, correct the faults of the play which were noted by the critics, and make a truly great motion picture.

A Broadway hit now seems to be merely a rehearsal for a movie.

The movies these days don't take stage hits and spoil them; they don't buy stage plays and turn them into pictures which are ridiculed by the dramatic critics. More and more the drama critics have been going to the movies and writing praise reviews of the pictures.

A prominent example was Sam Goldwyn's purchase of "The Children's Hour." The Hays office wouldn't let him use the title or say he had bought the play; most of the play was censorable and there were gags about what a foolish gesture this purchase was. But the movies knew what they were doing, and "The Children's Hour" became "These Three," a fine picture, praised by even those who hailed it a great play.

The rebel Odets went for Hollywood. In an interview he stated that he liked the movies, that he liked being a scenario writer, and that the screen gave an author more scope; the stage limited an author physically. Odets mentioned only one drawback of the screen: an author couldn't really say anything. This is mainly true. Yet there have been rare examples of intelligent celluloid talk, where opinions about social problems have been expressed: "All Quiet on the Western Front," "I'm a Fugitive," "The Informer," "Fury," and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." It must be remembered that these pictures played cities where Broadway plays which said nothing were barred.

Odets had several offers to work in the studios but chose "The General Died at Dawn" assignment because he wanted to work with Director Lewis Milestone. He wanted to work with a competent director and learn the picture business. Writer and director working on a picture together from the beginning seems to be the best combination for fine pictures.

Odets took the novel "The General Died at Dawn," read it, discussed it with Director Milestone, and together they outlined a screen play. Then Odets went to work writing it. He didn't write at the studio. He wrote at home, generally in the morning from 1 to 5 o'clock. He likes to sit at a typewriter in his underwear or his pajamas. He types furiously and has pages of notes about him. He clips photographs of people in the news from magazines and newspapers, and often takes characteristics of these people and give them to his play characters. He even writes with the photographs before him. He writes very much as he talks.

Richwood Bank Dividend.

Richwood, W. Va., Sept. 13.—Depositors of the closed Richwood Banking & Trust Co. Bank this week will receive a dividend amounting to $16,200.

Got a License for That Gat, Gary?

This would seem to be a key-roocial moment in "The General Dies at Dawn," which bows in when "The Gorgeous Hussy" bows out at the Palace. The figures in this exciting scene are Gary Cooper and Madeleine Carroll, who co-star in the melodrama.

CHAPTER XIV.

His Former Wife's Plans.

For the next few days, the newspapers printed a mixture of truth and fiction. Their columns, under large headlines, held a somewhat disgruntled tone as if they felt aggrieved at being cheated out of a big news story by the stupidities of those concerned. At any rate, Dr. Ware's version to the manager of the Excelsior was followed pretty closely. The public was told that Roger Mallard, due to years of overwork with few vacations, had suffered a breakdown. Upon the orders of his physicians he was to take a complete rest, and was shortly leaving on a long sea voyage. Consequently, his forthcoming production would be indefinitely postponed. Box office sales on the third day of the Los Angeles run of his latest picture, "The End of the Road," exceeded all bounds. Seats at the New York opening sold at the highest price ever paid for a cinema production.

As is customary, the public believed the lies and discounted the truth. The man in the street dismissed the episode with a phrase equivalent to "Find the Lady." Hollywood said: "Ha! Ha! We see Sol's fine Italian hand in this.

It was said that executives of Supreme Artists were jubilant. Having prophesied a financial flop for Sol's production which was undoubtedly an artistic triumph, they were now ready to admit that Sol was right to put his greatest star into an adult performance.

Gossip finally summed it up by saying that Sol's only mistake was to allow Mallard's kidnaping to be solved so quickly and so tamely. Nervous breakdowns were too common. They occurred wholesale after every fit of temperament, after every dropped option, after every divorce.

Some phases of all these views were held by a man and a woman who were reading the papers of January second and third in a suite of rooms on the top floor of the Excelsior. After they finished them, down to the last column, they looked across the scattered pile separating their chairs and smiled.

In Terms of Money.

"Well—I best cut along to my own hotel. The time's come when we can't be too careful," the man was saying. Then he added softly, "You've got your break at last, Zelda. This will mean a lot more money."

"Yes—I suppose so. What did you say her name was?"

"Pamela—or Pamella Wyeth."

"Rather a nice—a quaint name."

"Rather a nice and quaint lady. Decidedly inexperienced, I would say, in any sort of publicity or scandal."

"And Mal—"

"I think I may say that I've never seen a man escort a lady out of an hotel lobby in a more protective manner."

The woman got up abruptly and crossed the room to gleam moodily out of the window. On her dressing table, among the array of silver and crystal objects there, was a handsome professional photograph of Roger Mallard in a silver frame. His eyes seemed to follow her movements with a haughty and impersonal stare.

"It's strange," she said at last, "how things happen. When least expected. After years and years of waiting. With nothing. Always nothing. And then right on top of that letter from his attorneys——"

"Well, you had a break coming to you, my dear. I thought you'd get it sooner or later now Grimwold's gone. He was such a clever old watch dog. And Mallard's impulsive—hot-headed. And do you realize that he hasn't been alone—hasn't sailed his own canoe without an able skipper for any time to speak of in all these 14 years? Give him enough leeway and he'll sink himself."

Zelda acknowledged this in silence. After a little, she came back to her chair, bestowing a fiercely possessive look at Mallard's picture as she passed her dressing table.

"Well," she said, "I want a lawyer with as fine and dignified a reputation as I can get. I'd like an Englishman."

"Certainly. I live but to grant your wishes. There's a firm over in Pasadena—so I've found out with a little scouting. Geddes, Hilton and Geddes. The head of the firm, Mr. Gordon Geddes, comes from London. He's got a reputation as solid as the British Isles."

"How shall I approach him him?"

"Leave that to your devoted kinsman, Alfred Chetwyn. We'll figure it out. There's no hurry. In fact, the more time we take the better. Mallard will sink himself deeper. Unless I miss my guess, he's falling at last for a woman. And the very kind of woman we want."

Beating her fists softly on the arms of her chair, she refused to accept this.

"But he's mine! The law still says so. No other woman is going to take him from me!"

Chetwyn sprang up and seized her wrists.

"See here, Zelda," he spat out angrily, "are you or are you not going through with this thing as we planned it, and give me my reward when we've won out?"

"Of course, I am Alfred. Let go of my hands."

Glimmer of Romance.

"Well, then, stop these sentimental relapses. It's a poor line to give your dignified lawyer. And it's not going to make a hit with me if I find out that you've fooled me all these years and still care for the fellow."

"Don't be silly, Alfred! But how was I to know when we separated that night, he would develop into the very kind of man women go mad over?"

"Rubbish! You're allowing the romance of all his plays to color your judgment. In reality, you know he's far from romantic. Why, haven't you spent hours grousing about how it was ruining your voice screaming at him?"

"I've long thought that was just a line he used to torment me—to get rid of me. That trouble he had as a boy in the trenches was over before I ever knew him. I couldn't see that it hampered him. All it did was to make him downright uncanny at seeing every little thing that escaped other people—at picking thoughts out of your face and brain and off your lips that you were trying to hide. Just let me murmur anything extra stinging to relieve my feelings and he'd make me repeat it, louder and louder, till I thought I'd go mad. He knew it bored me to tears to repeat and explain everything I said. It was hell, I tell you. With no money. Awful lodgings— shut up together. And no talk except about going places where he could find peace and quiet."

"Then for God's sake, why are you going places night after night to watch his damned pictures Why are you buying photographs like that?"

"What's it to you?"

"A lot to me," Chetwyn said with meaning. "And a lot to you, too, if I should discover that the woman I've helped and cared for all these years is a wife who's fallen in love with her husband's pictures after she's kicked the real man out."

She turned on him furiously.

"Don't you dare say that! He was leaving me, I tell you."

"There's a lot in that episode—you being a lady who throws things when she's angry—that will need ticklish handling. Well, never mind!" he laughed shortly. "Time's your greatest ally. It all happened so long ago.

But with this fresh material—"

Little

"THE INFORMER." RKO-Radio production based on story by Liam O'Flaherty, screen play by Dudley Nichols, starring Victor McLaglen supported by Margot Grahame, Heather Angel, Preston Foster, Wallace Ford and others. Directed by John Ford. Revival.

It is fitting that this remarkable photoplay, which had to be weighted down with medals before the public would recognize its unique quality, was chosen to celebrate the Little's first anniversary as a revival emporium. This is the fourth visit of "The Informer" to the 600 block of Ninth street, and each time it has proved to be a very lucrative tenant.

Released in the spring of 1935 and subsequently shown at RKO-Keith's with indifferent success, "The Informer" since has gained a reputation which has few parallels. Its flawless acting, exciting story, peerless direction and skillful photography are treats to the eye, ear and intellect.

As simple as it is moving, the tale is of a blustering Irishman who informs on his pal, wanted by the Black and Tans as a leader in the 1922 rebellion. His excuse is the 20-pound reward offered by police which will suffice to take him and his sweetheart to America. The informer, Gypo (McLaglen) forfeits his life as a result, his death scene being one of the most gripping in the entire picture.

McLaglen, Margot Grahame, Preston Foster, Una O'Connor and all others in the compact cast acquit themselves with distinction. "The Informer" is, indeed, a happy union of every element needed in the making of a grand picture.

Supplementary attractions on the new week's bill at the Little are a revival of "La Cucaracha" and a travelogue on Ireland. G. G. G.

State Suggests Cuts In Budget of County

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 13 (AP).—The Anne Arundel County commissioners have received a letter from the State eciency and economy committee containing seven suggestions for reducing county expenses and lowering the tax rate.

E. Wilbur Stoll, secretary of the committee, signed the letter, which suggested, among other things, that "all unnecessary jobs" be eliminated.

Cotton Picker Loser in Contest With 'Croppers

Rust Brothers' Machine Rates Below Humans in Staple Quality.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, Sept. 13.—A million families of sharecroppers have won their first encounter with Rrust Brothers' mechanical cotton picker, an economic battle now in progress in the South that may end ultimately in a mass exodus from the cotton farms.

The American Cotton Co-operative Association has announced to its 258,000 former-members that in a fair test, hand-picked cotton was found to be three grades cleaner than cotton reaped by that ungainly contrivance at Stonesville, Miss., and therefore is worth $8.50 more a bale.

This means, in effect, that under normal conditions on an average farm it would cost about $21.50 a bale to pick cotton with the machine while hired hands could pick it for $15 a bale.

But not all cotton farms produce the average, or have the same topography of moisture, and A. C. C. A. officials agree with most others who have studied the invention of John and Mack Rust, that it already has definite advantages over hand pickers in some regions.

The Memphis brothers have been demonstrating their creation since 1931, but it was hauled out for first extensive tests this year in the long staple of the Mississippi Delta, and the world cotton industry sent its experts to watch.

What they saw was a device mounted on two wheels, pulled by a tractor. The picking apparatus was close to the ground, under a steel frame that straddled the cotton row. As it moved along about 3½ miles an hour, the plants entered a metal trough that compressed them so that revolving spindles could mesh themselves through the fiber.

There were 1,344 spindles in rows of 16 each on a revolving belt. The spindles were moistened by a revolving rubber drum. Moisture made cotton stick to the spindles, which, as they reached the end of the belt, were combed off and the cotton blown through an angular pipe to be dropped into a receiving bag that held 400 pounds.

There were two objections: The machine, while doing the work of 100 men, left some cotton behind; it picked up some leaf and plant with the cotton. Best estimates were that on a second run over a row it gathered about 90 per cent of the crop, which was its maximum efficiecy.

The question then arose, what of the quality of the machine-picked cotton? The A. C. C. A. obtained two samples from adjoining rows in the farm of J. L. Wilenman, of Stoneville. One was picked by hand, the other by the machine. Government graders made the test at A. C. C. A. offices here.

Technically, they found the hand-picked sample strict middling. The machine-picked sample was graded low middling in color; strict good ordinary leaf. Both samples were 1⅛ inch staple, ginned at the same gin. As defined by the new Government standards, it was a difference of three grades in favor of hand-picked cotton.

Former War Lord Of Morocco Asks Paris for Release

Paris, Sept. 13 (AP).—Abd-El-Krim, former war lord of the Riffs, broke his proud silence today with a promise to "be useful to France" if freed from his ten-year exile.

For ten years, since he surrendered under joint Franco-Spanish military pressure, he has been in Napoleonic retirement on tiny Reunion Island, in the Indian Ocean.

On the Air Today

If someone in the NBC program department had taken all the quarter hours in the Monday schedule and thrown them into the air and then selected them as they were picked up from the floor, one by one, for the morning's fare at WRC, the changes in that station's program could not have turned in larger numbers.

And if you have a favorite Monday morning program, be guided accordingly and study the time table on this page.

Accounting for most of the major changes in program time are the new serial dramas returning to the air after vacations. "Mrs. Wiggs," "Office Wife" (now titled "John's Other Wife"), "Pain Bill," "Backstage Wife" and "Mary Marlin" all make their appearances today.

Even WJSV has entered into the conspiracy to overwhelm the listening public with dramatic serials, introducting "The Big Sister," which is to tell the story of a young woman who devotes her life to a crippled brother and younger sister. The hour is 10:30 a. m.

Those listeners who have found Monday mornings a little boring have only to begin at the crack of dawn now to follow the intimate revelations of everything in the lives of office wives and sophisticated stage folk to the simple affairs of plain Bills.

* * * *

His Holiness Pope Pius XI will address a radio message to sufferers in Spain's civil war early this morning, (WRC and WMAL at 5 o'clock.) The talk will originate in the Vatican, brought to this country by short wave.

* * * *

Highlights today:

Grand Duchess Marie—Speaks on etiquette and manners in "Magazine of the Air," WJSV, at 10 a. m. Leonard Barron contributes some hints on gardening.

Ruth Chatterton — Supported by Brian Aherne, in "Quality Street," in Radio Theater, WJSV, at 8.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe—In another talk about the Dionne quints, "Contented Hour," WRC, at 9.

Best amateurs — Brought to the WOL mike for an hour's revue, the pick of the WOL amateur crop for the last year, at 9.

"Nickelodeon" — Radio burlesque of old-time 5-cent picture shows, returns to WMAL, at 9:30. First production, a Civil War melodrama.

Morgan Eastman, "Contented Hour" maestro, once swore he would never direct an orchestra in Strauss' immortal waltz, "Beautiful Blue Danube"—but he has relented and requests for the number finally will be honored tonight. Reason for Eastman's aversion: Years ago, as a young 'cellist, Eastman played a season in a summer garden in Vienna. All was gaity and laughter—but every night, at every consert, the orchestra was called on to play the Strauss waltz once, twice—again and again. When Eastman packed to return to the States he said to the first violinist: "If I ever have an orchestra of my own, I vow now never to play that blankety-blank tune so long as I live." He has kept the vow—until today!

Richard Himber resumes his guest star policy tonight—but Harry Richman and Dick Merrill will not be present. Himber invited them several days ago—if the return flight from England has been made, of course . . . The "Sunday Evening Hour" concerts will be resumed next Sunday night with Fritz Reiner conducting . . . Stoopnagle and Budd announce that Don Voorhees will be their musical director when they begin their own series at the conclusion of the "Town Hall Tonight" pinchhit engagement they now are on . . . And Jack Benny announces the engagement of Don Wilson for another season. The Benny band has yet to be selected.

Steel Output In August Peak For Six Years

Labor Day Drops Week's Operations to 69.5 Per Cent of Capacity.

Cleveland, Sept. 13.—Far from experiencing a summer lull the steel industry shows statistically a forward movement from July to August. More steel is being produced and more finished steel shipped. Steel ingot production in August was 7 per cent higher than in July, a gain of 272,399 tons to the highest level since March, 1930. In eight months of this year total production of ingots is only 4,000,000 tons less than in all of 1935, says Steel.

Shipment of finished steel by the United States Steel Corporation in August was at the rate of 35,527 tons daily and in July 35,216 tons, indicating acceleration of output and needs of consumers. With one day less work August showed a slight decline in total shipments.

Because of the Labor Day holiday in some producing centers and incidence of considerable repair work on furnaces at Youngstown the national steel operating rate for the week is down 2 points to 69½ per cent. A rebound next week is indicated, which may carry the rate higher than during August.

Opeerations in the Buffalo district were up 6 points to 81 per cent; and in the Pittsburgh district 2 points to 72 per cent. Cleveland was down 2½ to 79½ per cent; eastern Pennsylvania 1 to 47½; Youngstown, 12 to 67; New England, 10 to 70, and Cincinnati, 4 to 78. Others were unchanged.

Price Changes.

Following announcement of fourth-quarter prices a week ago by the leading interest on a number of items independent producers are sending out announcements to the same effect. Additionally, cold-rolled strip, alloy steel and ferromanganese prices have been reaffirmed. Cold-drawn bars and reinforcing bars remain to be announced for fourth quarter. Seamless tube rounds are automatically increased $2 per ton by the bar advance, as these are sold on the bar card. Considerable opinion exists to the effect that reinforcing bars will be advanced, following carbon bars.

Award of structural shapes last week at over 19,000 tons, was nearly double the 11,129 tons reported the preceding week. In reinforcing bars lettings were almost the same total, 3,827 tons for last week and 3,935 for the preceding period.

Several unusual tonnages of steel have been placed in the past week or are pending, offering substantial support to production. Contract has been let for the assembly plant of General Motors at Linden, N. J., 6,550 tons, and for a subway section 5,040 tons is pending. Chicago fabricators estimate close to 90,000 tons of structural work is being figured in that area. Bids have been taken again on the United States liner for which 15,000 tons of hull steel will be required. Several builders submitted bids this time. Taking of bids on a Government dry dock for Honolulu, T. H., 40,000 tons of steel, has been deferred from September 30 to November 22.

Markets Wait for Fall Trade as Rate of Business Maintains Activity.

New York, Sept. 13.—While the stock market last week was sensitive much of the time to political developments at home and to military and political maneuvers abroad, its chief support was the comparatively high rate of business activity and the hope for its continuance.

Bonds were strong in most sections, maintained by the rising tide of excess bank reserves, the aid given the Government section by the attraction of a favorably priced new issue announced by the Treasury, and the plain fact that regardless of the recent increase in business, borrowing of funds, investment of savings, via the insurance companies, and employment of excess bank credit are compelled to take Government obligations.

Commodity markets were more tranquil, aside from a midweek spurt in cotton which followed publication of the Government's monthly crop estimate, indicating a considerable drop in the crop as compared with the previous estimate. Agricultural prices on balance changed little last week, and the tone was a shade easier in some of the metal and mine groups. The Bureau of Labor's price index for the week fell to 80.9, compared with 81.2 in the previous week; but the cost of living nevertheless steadily rises, with consumers now beginning to feel to an increasing extent the effects of lower production, forced in part by Government planning and in part by droughts, as well as the effects of higher taxes.

Trade Statistics.

Trade statistics for the week were somewhat distorted by the incidence of the Labor Day holiday, but they supported the view that this summer business has been better than seasonal and that the prospects for the autumn are better than they have been in several years, notwithstanding the disturbance of the Presidential election and the war nervousness in Europe. It is yet early to say how much of a brake on progress the summer's drought will prove to be, but its effect on rural purchasing power will at least be postponed by the doubling of the Government's dole distribution in the affected areas, partly under pretense of relief and partly under the notion that some political good may be accomplished.

Railroad freight-car loadings for last week increased moderately above those for the previous week, and were sharply higher than the total for the corresponding period of last year which contained the holiday. Electrical output continued its remarkable gain, and the steel industry found the Labor Day decline to be short lived. Higher prices for steel products were announced last week. Recovery in the motor industry is confidently expected, and for the leading producer August brought the highest total of sales to the public enjoyed for a number of years.

More Spending.

On all sides, in fact—travel, installment buying, amusements, clothing and even housing—the signs now point to a loosening of the public's purse strings, which, however gratifying as indicating business improvement, is giving some concern as a possible forerunner of inflation and later recession. The Government has set the example for unlimited spending, and the public is beginning to follow, worrying less and less apparently over where the money is coming from.

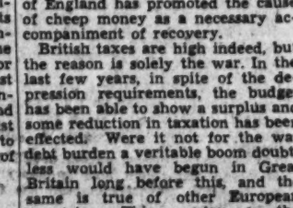
As President Roosevelt last week said, the depression seems to have been conquered. At any rate, recovery is in full swing and is gathering enough momentum to warrant optimism for the near future. To whom belongs the credit might not be important, except to the politically jealous, were it not for the supposition that, if unsound economic experiments are thereby held to have been justified, they may be prolonged, or worse ones substituted. In this connection it is interesting to turn to Great Britain.

Bank of England.

In England certain orthodox politics on business have been pursued by the Government, and the Bank of England has promoted the cause of cheep money as a necessary accompaniment of recovery.

British taxes are high indeed, but the reason is solely the war. In the last few years, in spite of the depression requirements, the budget has been able to show a surplus and some reduction in taxation has been effected. Were it not for the war debt burden a veritable boom doubtless would have begun in Great Britain long before this, and the same is true of other European countries. This country, on the other hand, had its war obligations down to manageable proportions before the depression began. Our real debt worries have come about solely as a result of the New Deal's "fight" against the "dragon" of depression.

July Home Building 50% Over Year Ago



Boston, Mass., Sept. 13.—The value of July residential building passed a year ago by 50 per cent, whereas in the first seven months of this year the value was 59 per cent greater than in the corresponding 1935 months. Estimates at hand indicate that speculative residential building leads. Many cities report a definite shortage of single and two-family houses for rent.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Decline in Week

New York, Sept. 13.—New York City bank stocks reacted slightly during the past week, according to records compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on September 11 amounted to $1,999,871,000, compared with $2,004,942,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $3,271,000, or 0.26 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 3.25 per cent compares with a yield of 3.24 per cent on September 4. The current market value is now 1.52 times the known book value, against 1.53 times a week ago. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 21.9 times their known earnings, the same as the previous week.

N. Y. Central Earns 21c a Share in July

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—The New York Central Railroad Co., including all leased lines, reports for July net income after all fixed charges of $1,049,693, equal to 21 cents a share on the capital stock.

In the same month last year the system showed a deficit of $1,850,790.

Dividend Changes.

New York, Sept. 13 (AP).—Favorable dividend changes in the past week totaled 84 compared with 57 in the preceding week, Standard Statistics Co., reported today. There were no unfavorable changes against four in the previous period.

German Delegation to Power Conference Is Entertained.

Party Returns to District in Buses to Start Tour of U. S.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Ambassador of Germany, Dr. Hans Luther, was host at a farewell party yesterday at his summer home in Bluemont. Members of the delegation of more than 100 of his countrymen, here for the Third World-Power Conference last week, were his guests.

The Third Secretary of Embassy, Herr Herbert Blankenhorn, had charge of arrangements and saw that the guests boarded the three buses which called for them at the Wardman Park Hotel at 10:15. Nearly all of them had cameras—they were as much a part of their outfits as hats—and they used them when they stopped en route at the Great Falls of the Potomac, part of Dr. Luther's plan for their trip into Virginia.

One of the ladies in the party was Frau Marie Steinoff, of Essen. Her late husband, Dr. Steinoff, was to mining in Germany what Dr. Julius Dorpmuller is to the railroads and was a close friend of his and Gen. von Epp's. She came over with the delegation and has been here during the week. Last night she left for Texas to visit an uncle.

Yesterday she renewed a friendship made on the Bremen, with Herr and Frau Wilhelm Zimmermann. Herr Zimmermann was associated with her husband in China 30 years ago, but it was not until this trip to America that she had met either Herr Zimmermann or his wife. The latter is a sister of Herr Kurt Sell, Washington correspondent for German newspapers, and with him, she and her husband were guests of the ambassador. They have been in Detroit and Chicago and arrived in the Capital only yesterday morning.

Dr. Dorpmuller and Gen. von Epp were not present at the party as they flew to Buffalo Saturday night.

The ambassador, his two daughters, Gertrude and Eva Marie, Frau Edmund Koerner, of Essen, who is here with them from Germany for the summer, young Countess Lilian Douglas and Frau Koerner's young nephew, Uwe Jens Westphal, were all on the veranda to welcome the guests as they arrived. The German flag waved from a rustic pole near the house.

Just before luncheon Dr. Luther addressed the guests, who were assembled on the lawn. He stood on the veranda, tall, slender Uwe Jens Westphal beside him in the uniform of the Hitler youth organization.

Herring salad, sausages and plum cake were among the German delicacies on the menu. The luncheon was served from long tables on the veranda and small tables and chairs were arranged in the shade of canopies on the lawn, in a spot commanding a superb sweep of the Shenandoah Valley. "Just like "Austria," remarked Dr. Ernst Schobert, who was the only Austrian delegate included in the company.

Countess Douglas and Fraulein Eva Marie Luther, who have been studying English this summer and speaking nothing else except on Saturdays and Sundays, were having a beautiful time talking German to all the guests. They and Eva Marie's "twin cousin," Uwe, just the same age, will return to Washington with the ambassador next week and will enter Western High School, to attend until November, when they will return to Germany.

The two girls wore frocks of blue and white. Fraulein Gertraud Luther wore a frock of white mousseline de soie with a sash of red, and Frau Koerner, a flowered chiffon.

Frau Struve, wife of the Second Secretary of Embassy, who, with Herr Struve, has just returned from a visit in Germany, was assisting and was wearing a suit of white linen with a broad-brimmed straw hat.

Dr. Hans Thomsen, new Counselor of Embassy, was there, as were the Military and Air Attache and Frau von Boetticher. Dr. Ernest Correll, of American University, and Mrs. Correll and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Droop were the only Washingtonians in the company aside from those of the embassy staff.

When the guests departed, singing German songs as the bus wound its way down the lane from the estate, Dr. Luther, his elder daughter and Frau Koerner came across the lawn to the outer road to wave goodby, and, mounted on the gateposts at either side of the entrance, were Frauline Eva Marie and Mr. Westphal calling out "auf wiedersehen." Farther down the road Senhorita Zazi Aranha, daughter of the Ambasasdor of Brazil, a neighbor at Bluemont, waved a cheery greeting as she passed in a little blue roadster with three other girls.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Two noted Americans who served in the A. E. F., one as its commander and the other as a colonel, yesterday observed their birthday anniversaries. They are Gen. John J. Pershing and Col. Theodore Roosevelt.

Gen. Pershing lived here at times for a number of years and Col. Roosevelt passed his young manhood at the White House while his father was President and later lived here when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy during President Harding's Administration.

After a notable career as governor general of Puerto Rico and the Philippines, Col. Roosevelt is now engaged in the publishing business in New York City and is prominent in the Republican high command. As president of the National Republican Club of New York he has done much to bring party doctrine to the attention of the public through frequent addresses.

Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt live at Oyster Bay not far from Sagamore Hill, where Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the President, maintains the family home. Their children are growing up and there is a grandchild, William McMillan, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William McMillan. Mrs. McMillan, the former Miss Grace Roosevelt, is the only daughter of the Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt. Their three sons all bear historic family names as follows: Theodore Roosevelt 3d, Cornelius Roosevelt, and the youngest son is Quentin Roosevelt, named for his uncle who died fighting the enemy in the World War.

That Col. Roosevelt's family shares the traditional love of pets which distinguishes this clan was shown in a recent picture of the family with their dogs, which include a poodle called Poilu; a terrier, Bismarck; an Airedale puppy called Donald.

Gen. Pershing, who returned from Europe last spring, is in Nebraska with his sister, Miss Mary Pershing. He expects to return to France later in the fall to resume his work as head of the American Graves Commission.

Wedding bells joined in the jingle of Phi Beta Kappa keys in the family of Mr. Clyde Bruce Aitchison, Interstate Commerce Commissioner, when he was married in Portland, Oreg., to Dr. Ada McCown, legislative assistant of the Library of Congress.

Both Commissioner Aitchison and his daughter, Miss Beatrice Aitchison, possess these symbols of scholarship. Miss Aitchison won her Ph. D. from John Hopkins University in Baltimore.

The Rev. Sparkman To Wed Miss Elliott

Parents of Latter Reveal Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Elliott, of Wilmington, N. C., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Esther Ellery Elliott, to the Rev. Thorne Sparkman, of Baltimore.

Miss Elliott, who is a graduate of the Natoinal Cathedral School, made her debut in Wilmington and at the Bachelors Cotillion in Baltimore, and since that time has been studying music in New York City.

Mr. Sparkman was graduated from the University of South Carolina and attended Oxford University as a Rhodes scholar. He is now rector of Christ Church in Baltimore.

Miss Reidy to Be Bride Of Mr. Joseph T. Healy

The marriage of Miss Mary Curtin Reidy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Reidy, of Washington, to Mr. Joseph Thomas Healy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Healy, of this city, will take place in St. Patrick's Church at 10 a. m., October 10. The ceremony will be followed by a breakfast and reception.

Miss Reidy is a graduate of St. Patrick's Academy and is a member of St. Patrick's Alumnae Association.

D. C. Chapter of D. A. R. Will Banquet Oct. 24

The fifteenth annual banquet of the District Chapter of the Daughtersters of the American Revolution, will be held October 24 at the Mayflower. Miss Lillian Chenoweth is president of the organization and Mrs. Charles C. Haig is chairman of the program.

Mrs. Haig has invited the board of governors and members of the organization to attend the Constitution Day ceremonies to be held on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at Memorial Continental Hall.

Mrs. Louis Simon has as her guests for the week-end her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Merryle S. Rukeyser, of New York, for whom she entertained at supper and a boat ride on Saturday evening on Mr. James Simon's cruiser, the Helma.

Mrs. Arthur White, of Middleburg, has left for New York and is at the Vanderbilt.

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Seekford and their son, Page, have returned from a motor trip up the Atlantic Coast, visiting New York, Boston, Bar Harbor and New Brunswick, Canada, and returning by way of the White Mountains.

Miss Waterman, Mr. Page to Wed

Ceremony Will Take Place in the Fall.

Of interest in Washington is the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Ann Waterman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bond Waterman, of New York, to Mr. Nelson Whitney Page, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bertrand Archer Page, of West Hartford, Conn. Miss Waterman was graduated from Miss Madiera's School in Washington and attended Barnard College.

The engagement was announced at a dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Waterman at Sakonnet, R. I. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Mr. Page attended the Hill and Choate schools and is a graduate of Yale. He is a nephew of Mr. DeWitt Page, sportsman and industrialist.

R. Stevens Pendexters Back From Vacation

Dr. and Mrs. R. Stevens Pendexter have returned from a motor vacation, during which they stopped in Berkeley Springs, W. Va., to attend a conference of representatives of patriotic and historical societies, under auspices of the Rumseyan Society.

The societies met to further plans for a sesquicentennial in September, 1937, to celebrate the exhibition of the first steam propelled craft invented by James Rumsey while he lived in the town of Bath, now Berkeley Springs.

Mrs. Ernest G. Draper Returns to Capital

Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, has rejoined Mr. Draper in their apartment at the Shoreham, after spending the summer at Shore Acre, their place at Noroton, Conn.

Mr. Draper has been in Washington most of the summer, with week-end trips to Shore Acre.

Entertain for Delegate.

Travelogue.

"Have a good time on your vacation?"

"Perfectly marvelous! Do you know how many miles we made—5,487?"

"We made 5,489—say do you know all the time we were in Maine we slept under three blankets!"

"We slept under four in Yellowstone Park."

"Well, it got so cold up in the Adirondacks we had to get winter underwear—oh, say, guess who I saw in the White Mountains? Mabel Squeek!"

"Is that so! Say, you'll never guess who I saw in Glacier Park—the Boyd Twitters! Grace looks just like she always did. I don't see how she does it. Oh, and who do you think I ran on to at Going-to-the-Sun Mountain? Mae Doodle! You'd never know her. She's had her face lifted."

"Well, we saw the George Jitters at Cape Cod, and the Bruce McAddles in Boston and the Clarence Beetles in Bar Harbor.—Oh, and who do you think I saw at the Emerson House in Concord—Jim and Bess Oxley."

"That reminds me, I met a cousin of Bess Oxley's at Lake Louise. A Mrs. Blink. She was from Chicago—you know they're the big breakfast food Blinks. She was a perfectly lovely woman—and a marvelous bridge player."

"We met some perfectly lovely people at Lake Champlain—Mr. and Mrs. Lightcap. I tell you who she was—a Posey—you know the Posey pickle people in Detroit."

"There were lots of interesting people at Lake Louise—the Bohrers—you know the peanut Bohrers from Cleveland—and the Elmer Dummits—he's got the big nut cup factory in Seattle—and the Gerald Looneys—the Looney confetti people. You know that's one good thing about these mountain resorts, only the nicest people go to them."

"There were a lot of nice people up in the Berkshires—the Flyties' and the DeVashers—you know you hear so much of them in the horsey sets—and oh, yes, there was a Prince Something-or-Other——"

"There was an Irish early up at Lake Louise."

"How did you like Lake Louise?"

"The food was marvelous and, of course, the scenery——"

"Say, speaking of food, there are more quaint little eating places in Quebec. The hotels are nice, too."

"The hotel at Banff was wonderful. I wish you could have seen the size of our bathroom——"

"We had a marvelous bathroom in Montreal—all modernistic with black tile inlays."

"They have some grand new hotels in Detroit. The one we stayed at cost $5,697,000. And you'd be surprised at the stores. They have some wonderful things in spectator sports——"

"Oh, say, I picked up a perfectly wonderful little knit in Boston—for only $29.50—it's Dubonnet——"

"I got a darling sports hat in Duluth—a real Bilge for only $7.95. And I got some of the most adorable pottery in the Black Hills."

"I got some marvelous ivory elephants in Quebec."

"I got a brass antelope at Banff. I'm simply mad about—and some of the darlingest head portieres."

"Oh, you simply must see my porcelain Siamese cat. I got him at a little tea house in Nantucket—you know they have the most adorable tea houses in Nantucket."

"Well I never ate so much in my life as I did at the mountain chalets—we had fresh trout——"

"Say I wish you could have tasted the French cooking we got a Grand Pre—you know honestly I feel like a new woman."

"I feel like a new woman, too. You know it certainly does you a lot of good to get away from things for a while. You get in such a rut sticking around home, seeing the same people and all."

"I know—so narrow. That's one thing I always say about travel, it really pays for itself, it's so broadening."

The Brocades and Lames Used for Evening Gowns

Paris (U.P.)—Brocades and lames of every shade are used for evening gowns in the new Main bocher collection. Electric blue, striped in gold, is combined with the same material in wine red, for one gown, while another is made of the same shade of brilliant blue combined with a bright green. In the latter case, one side of the bodice and shoulder cape is green and the other blue lame. Long gloves are made to match, one of blue and the other of green lame.

Youthful Sophistication and Dash, Theme of This Designer

Patricia Perkins (right), young Hollywood designer, creates evening clothes which are as modern as tomorrow and which yet retain the illusion of youth. She believes a dress to be truly youthful must reflect the trends of the day. Below is Anita Louise, screen star, wearing an evening ensemble designed for her by Miss Perkins. The white taffeta gown is topped with a black cire jacket. Note the fitted waist and the jaunty flare of the jacket.

The sheathlike gown below of silvery blue satin, designed by Miss Perkins, shows both juvenile and sophisticated features.

That black can be chic and yet youthful is demonstrated in the frock blow designed by Miss Perkins.

Women Urged To Dominate Their Clothes

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

"DOMINATE your clothes, don't let them overpower you," advises Patricia Perkins, noted young Hollywood designer.

How is this accomplished? By reducing your accessories to a minimum and expressing the real you through the blending of design and personality, she contends.

"I definitely feel that American women are the youngest in the world," she says, "and as such, I design for sizes from 9 to 17—they are strictly younger styles, but are worn by all women who are young in attitude regardless of age."

In designing, Miss Perkins says, there is no primary matter to take into consideration. A successful frock, she believes is a combination of line, color and fabric. However, she claims that this rule is really not infallible, because if either color, fabric or line it important enough, the other two must be subordinate. "I am of the opinion that with the demands of modern life, especially in a metropolis, a woman necessarily becomes sophisticated, this attitude is translated into her clothes, with the aid of more definite body lines," explained this exponent of sleek youthfulness.

"I try to avoid the danger of an 'old' line in this case," she continued, "by creating a youthful effect in the absence of bothersome detail—the use of a high young neckline and often an almost impertinent look in the simplicity of many of my designs." The spirit of the times should also be reflected in clothes, believes Miss Perkins. And, because this seems to be an age of uncertainty, and the majority of persons are a little more free, they want to be more lavish. "I see the modern girl," she said, "as desiring to express herself in clothes, not coyingly romantic, but with a rich and eager poise."

Trimming, according to the Perkins point of view, is an integral art of the design. She never strives to "dress-up" a style by adding decoration; it simply must "belong" or it is not considered necessary. Although she may be fascinated by a particular clip, belt or such, and immediately design a frock to complement it properly; designing backward, as it were. Unlike many other designers, Miss Perkins lays claim to no favorite hues or tints. She prefers to allow the season's new shades to act as the impetus for her costumes; keeping in step with every current color parade.

"In selecting a wardrobe," she suggested, "I cannot emphasize enough, the importance of unity—the right clothes for the occasion. A few staple pieces, such as furs, coats and dark plain clothes must be of the best quality one can purchase. But, for freedom from monotony, every woman must first express her personality (which quite possibly, changes at intervals)." This is done, Miss Perkins explains, by experimenting until one finally discovers what type of costume makes her feel and look, the individual she really is—or, aspires to be, if that is her goal.

Since Miss Perkins is in Hollywood, we were anxious to know whether or not the movies influenced her designing. To that question, she told us, she does not directly receive inspiration from them, but being surrounded by beauty of scenery and feminine beauty as well, she cannot help but be influenced by the spirit found in Hollywood. "One fairly feels the future here," she enthusiastically exclaimed. This undoubtedly accounts for the smart subtlety in her creations—they are of a prevailing season and still, beyond it, take its course. Don't hang on his words and don't run after him during the evening. Greet him and if he doesn't give you a "break," turn easily to someone else.

Parents Often Are to Blame For Accidents

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"QUICK, NOW, Sam, run for it!" Mrs. Jones was too impatient to wait for traffic signals. It was not that she was pressed for time. The ten seconds or half-minute lost by obeying the rules would not have affected her day's program.

She was one of those people who always runs to places, and will dash madly to catch a bus when another just like it is half a block behind. There are hundreds of women like her, victims of their own nervous impatience.

If they injured only themselves by their senseless hurry, it would be quite all right, and no one would need to complain. But too often they drag along their children and not only risk those children's lives at the moment, but also teach them very bad habits.

The child who has learned to slip through a temporary halt in the traffic and wait in the center of the street for another chance to dash over against the lights is learning contempt for ordinary precautions.

The only way to teach a child to obey rules is to obey them one's self. Mothers would do very well if they not only attended to every gesture the policeman makes, and obeyed every known rule of the road, but if they also called their children's attention to the need of such obedience, and instructed them in the traffic regulations and the need for them.

Most of the automobile accidents are the fault of parents who have neglected to observe or teach the need for obeying the rules.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

How 'Nerves' Injure Health.

According to the figures of the ministry of health, about 30 per cent of all the illness in Great Britain is believed to be due to functional nervous disease, and a recent report by E. F. Skinner warns emphatically against misinterpreting many of the symptoms as evidences of organic disease (actual changes in the tissues).

For our purpose we may consider three types of functional disorders: (1) hysteria, (2) that which results from anxiety, and (3) that which is characterized by obsessions. While each differs from the others, all hark back to the same failure, namely, the inability of the victim to adapt himself to his environment—his family, his employment, or his friends.

Easily Misunderstood.

Let us consider the simplest form—hysteria—in which the individual is unhappy, uncongenial and feels that he is misunderstood by every one. He is like the youngster who believes that nobody loves him and who declares he is going out into wolly and smooth.

Failing to attract attention in any other manner, he plans for himself a line of conduct which is spectacular and which he hopes will bring sympathy. He is simply reverting to a childlike type of behavior. If the manifestation resolves itself into illness, and if the members of the family respond with solicitude, with jellies, fruits, flowers, and books, the patient may settle into a state of satisfied repose.

Some of us have encountered the typical hysteric who has been bedridden for years—the center of interest for a large circle of friends and relatives, the recipient of felicitations on his (or her remarkable fortitude in bearing up. The fact is that the "sufferer" is extremely happy and would be unwilling to exchange the couch for health unless some equally compensating advantage were in prospect.

The anxious patient, on the other hand, is irritable, quick, mentally alert, and strongly desirous of recovering his health. But he is afraid of failing in whatever he undertakes. He shuns competition because he fears he will be worsted and thus disgraced. One of the most pronounced dangers of unemployment lies in the possible development of a neurosis, making the individual utterly incompetent to take on even a minor task. Idleness, however, does not affect every one alike, as some will complacently accept conditions as they are and become willing dependents for life, with complete loss of ambition.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Blind Girl, Who Has Been Offered Marriage by Man She Loves, Wonders if She Dare Accept Him.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 19 years of age and have been blind since I was 13 years old. The man I am very much in love with has asked me to marry him. In later years would he tire of being married to one who cannot see? Would our marriage have a tragic ending? Please help me. Please answer in the paper. Your column is read to me every day.

ANXIOUS.

* * * *

DEAR ANXIOUS: I daresay the average man would be much happier married to a woman who saw too little rather than one who saw too much. If your blindness has not prevented this man's falling in love with you, I see no reason why it should one day end in love. It is folly to try to cross bridges mentally that one may never set foot on actually. In the words of the old Irish saying, "It's time enough to bid the Devil good morning when you meet him."

* * * *

Your blindness may even be made into a matrimonial asset, if you adopt the right attitude about it. If your husband feels your constant, confident trust in and dependence upon him, he will probably cherish you a great deal more tenderly than he might if you had your eyesight and, having it, were inclined to be too independent and self-sufficient.

Thank God for this man's love, accept it, treasure it, respond to it and forget about the "ifs" and "buts." Everyone who marries runs the risk of one day coming upon the tragic ending of his or her romantic dream. But "he either fears his fate too much, or his desserts are small, who dare not put it to the touch, to win or lose it all."

M. H.

On Greeting Old Flame.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last year, during my senior year in high school, I was very friendly with a boy of my own age. In fact, each of us knew of our regard for the other. He called at my home several times and when school closed he promised to call to see me during the summer. To this date I have neither seen him nor heard from him.

Now I know for a fact that we are both going to attend a party given by one of our friends. I want to go to the party, as one of my best friends is giving it, and I am sure he will be there. How shall I greet him and what shall I say if he asks to call? Please answer through the newspaper, as I always read your column. PUZZLED.

* * * *

DEAR PUZZLED: Greet the young man exactly as you would greet any classmate you had been fond of during the school term and had not seen since school closed. If you want me to put words in your mouth, they might go something like this: "Oh, hello, there. How are you? What on earth have you been doing with yourself all summer?" Then if you've heard from someone else that he's been driving a milk truck, or selling magazines, or being life guard, say so, and ask him if he expects to make it his life's work, or any other nonsensical small talk that occurs to you.

* * * *

If he shies away from you, as if fearful that you are angry at him for not having kept his promise to see you, you can take your choice of ignoring him altogether or going directly up to him and saying: "I beg your pardon. But haven't we met somewhere before? The face is so familiar." And go on from there with any light talk. The latter course would probably be better strategy, in case you wish to give him the impression that you have forgotten your last winter's crush on him. He'll probably think you're nursing a peeve if you don't say something to him.

If he shows you some marked attention and asks to call, don't force your telephone number or free evenings down his throat. Say, "Oh, that would be swell.. I'd love to have you," and change the subject. Then, if he insists on making a specific date, tell him to telephone you one day next week. And if he says, "ow about Thursday?" say, "Oh, sorroy, I'm busy Thursday night," and after that let Nature

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

MY BUSINESS, as well as my consistent interest in the improvement of the breed, occasionally takes me to the bevy of race tracks which surround this roaring boom-town, and there is one pretty girl I invariably look up on my visits to the gallopers.

MARY HIRSCH.

Her name is Mary Hirsch, and while she is the traditional womanly woman of song and story, the great interest and passion of her life (up to now) is the cluster of sleek and beautiful thoroughbreds for whose care and feeding she is responsible. For Mary Hirsch is the only woman trainer of race-steeds in the country. Her famous father, Max, has saddled more winners than any of his colleagues in the past year or two, and Mary is her Pop's daughter!

Ever since she was a very young school girl, a decade ago, she has been devoted to horses, and after a long apprenticeship she received her own trainer's license two years ago. This summer her cup of joy overflowed all over the paddock when a 2-year-old named No Sir carried her yellow and red silks to victory in the Diana Handicap, beating a mighty colt called Pompoon.

Mary's a college graduate, and a charming though rather reticent girl. I never see her—her dark eyes shining, as one of her horses comes thundering down the stretch in front—but what I realize that it is going to take a Dream Man of tremendous voltage to woo and win Mary Hirsch from her beloved bangtails!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—That mob of starry-eyed young men I saw pushing and shoving on a Hudson River pier the other day was not waiting for a glimpse of a movie cutie, but was a welcoming committee from the Park avenue stagline. greeting, 16-year-old. Gloria Baker, one of the most luscious of local junior glamour-girls, back from a summer overseas.. Young Alfred G. Vanderbilt is her half-brother. Gloria, for all her extreme youth, has one of the biggest collections of beaux in town . . . Another of the younger set, Medora, of the colossal Clan Roosevelt, has set a December date for her marriage to Herbert A. Whiting, of Boston. Medora is known to her pals around and about as "Dody," and her nuptials will remove a very popular lass from circulation.

* * * *

Columnist Farnsworth, of here, says he knows a young lady who spends so much time in our justly popular Stork Club, night spot which is haunted both by Broadway and the Avenue, that she now stands at the bar on one foot!

New services of all sorts are forever cropping up—and they are always the product of some imaginative and ingenious gal. Now it is Mildred Johnson, former flier, who pops up with air shopping. She has arranged with an express agency to deliver practically anything anywhere by plane. One of her prime aims, Mildred tells me, is to buy clothes and things here for ladies in other parts of the country—and deliver them the next day.

* * * *

The papers are always filled clear to the want-ad section with stories and pictures of our Mrs. Harrison Williams, long on the "Best-Dressed Woman" throne, but who knows Mr. Harrison Williams? Many, for he is not really a "forgotten man," but a handsome, courtly and successful financier—and how he has to finance that wardrobe! I just saw him stepping off a boat, after a visit with the Mrs. in Capri.

Caucus Day.

Detroit, Sept. 13.—Today was caucus day at the Book-Cadillac Hotel, where the A. F. G. E. convention opens tomorrow.

Some of the caucuses were informal affairs, held in the hotel rooms with delegates sprawled across the beds and seated on radiators and window sills. Others were miniature conventions that required fairly large meeting rooms.

The morning was given over to preliminary caucuses—the temporary certificates lodges met, also the colored lodges and numerous groups of field lodges. In the afternoon the "progressives" held their major caucus, the conservatives waiting until the evening. The various national vice presidents from the civil service districts outside of Washington met with delegates from their districts all day.

How to "stop Stengle" was the principal point discussed at the "progressive" caucuses. The District conservatives were scheduled to take up a number of amendments designed to place the "progressive" lodges at none-too-tender mercies of the Washington members of the executive council.

District conservatives remained unusually silent about the terms of these amendments, apparently desiring to learn how the field lodges will react against the amendments before introducing them.

More than ever it seems that the balance of power in the convention lies with the field lodges and that they are none too anxious to vote blanket support for the actions of the four Washington members of the executive council.

National Treasurer Cecil E. Custer and Col. Charles I. Stengle, the latter being backed by the District conservatives for the presidency, have entered into a gentlemen's agreement not to outfumble one another for the luncheon check. It's to be dutch treat all the way.

Convention Hall.

The main ballroom of the hotel was still having things done to it today but hotel officials assured everyone the hall would be ready for tomorrow's opening session.

The ballroom, which is 145 feet long and 45 feet wide, has received a fresh coat of paint and all the loose boards tacked up and doors fixed so they will open easily. One side of the ballroom is all window. The convention hall is large enough to seat 1,000 but only about 400 seats are to be set up which should give ample space for excited delegates to move around in.

Not only is the ballroom blessed with air-conditioning but its height is two floors, with a balcony. The balcony on the second floor seems ideal for spectators (or hecklers).

Committee rooms have been set aside on the balcony floor. There will be rooms for the press, which probably won't be used at all, for the auditing, credentials, by-laws and resolutions committees.

George Googe, Southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, is in town to see the Detroit Tigers play—or at least that's what he says. George who is one of the A. F. of L.'s ace trouble-shooters and steered the A. F. G. E. convention last year, said he was amazed to learn that it was rumored that he would preside at the convention. George, however, is sticking around.

Thomas O. Fee, of Postoffice Department No. 27, and Capt. Thomas Breslin, of Public Building and Public Parks, were the first District delegates, outside of the national officers, to arrive. Fee's explanation was bad fishing on Lake Erie and the captain's, of course, was his 1937 automobile.

Henry Rhine, of WPA, and Jessica Buck, of the Railroad Retirement Board, were in such a hurry to get to the scene of the battle that they flew here Friday morning.

Council Meetings.

There has been an air surrounding the meetings of the national executive council that is positively mysterious. Cecil Custer is the official spokesman for the council and from what Cecil tells the newspapermen it would seem that nothing was ever done but "just talk generally without deciding on anything."

The only explanation that occurred to us was that either matters of ominous portent were being settled or—more likely—that the members of the executive council were sparring and doing the real work in their respective hotel rooms.

When the Justice Lodge representatives completed presenting their case to the executive council, they didn't wait around the hotel lobby for the decision. Bennet Mead went back to his hotel while Isidor Weiberg Samuel Schnerler and Howard Westwood, the lodge attorney, went off to a ball game.

Col. Stengle has set himself up in the hotel lobby as a sort of one man welcoming committee.

Shooting Climaxes Quarrel at Capitol

A family argument on the Capitol grounds ended in a near riot early yesterday when a colored man was shot in the arm, a Capitol policeman cut and bruised and another man charged with assault on the policeman.

According to a report filed at the Fourth Precinct station, Policeman Paul C. Palmer, 21, a member of the Capitol force, attempted to stop an argument between Walter Johnson, colored, 42, of 242 Third street southwest, and his wife, Irene.

When Palmer intervened he was struck by Johnson, the report said. During the struggle, Harry Jackson, colored, 38, of 427 Second street southwest, attempted to disarm Palmer, who had been thrown to the ground. The gun was discharged and Jackson fled.

Palmer subdued Johnson, took him to Casualty Hospital for treatment for cuts and bruises and later charged him with assault at the First Precinct Station.

Conservatives Seek A.F.G.E. Quick Ballot

District Lodge Chiefs Will Try to Push Presidential Choice.

'Stop-Stengle' Movement Grows Among Convention Liberals.

By Samuel Lubell.

Detroit, Sept. 13.—District conservative leaders of the American Federation of Government Employes will attempt to push through the election of a new president at tomorrow's opening session of the federation's fifth annual convention.

Faced with a growing "Stop Stengle" movement, conservatives plan to introduce a rule moving up the election from the last day of the convention immediately after E. Claude Babcock, president, submits his resignation for approval.

Other convention developments were the following decisions by the executive council:

Reinstatement of Panama Canal Lodge, No. 6, in Washington, suspended last spring for urging the recall of Babcock because of his handling of the leave bills.

Voting of a second suspension for Justice Lodge.

Agreement to make public to every delegate a full report of what occurred at the meeting of the executive council at which Babcock was forced to resign. This action was interpreted as the council's reply to Babcock's demands that the full minutes of the meeting be made public and rumors that he might "hire a hall" to do so.

Seek Stengle Election.

By forcing the presidential election immediately after the report of the committee on credentials, conservative leaders hope to elect Colf. Charles I. Stengle, for the last two years in charge of the federation's organization and legislative work, before elements opposing him can unite.

In these opposition elements are at least five field members of the national executive council—Perry Myers, of Seattle; John F. Daniels, of Philadelphia; James A. Campbell, of Cincinnati; Edgar M. Carpenter, of Detroit, and James B. Burns, of San Francisco—who are seeking a compromise among the "progressive" lodges from the District and Tennessee Valley, the majority of the New York delegation, scattered field lodges supporting "favorite son" candidates, and Babcock.

Both Babcock and John R. W. Smith, who is being supported by the New York delegation and the progressive lodges — roughly 50 votes in all—taunted the conservatives with "being so afraid they need a hurry-up elections," and announced they would fight to the limit against the rule. Whether Campbell and Burns, who are being supported by the field members of the council, would offer strenuous opposition to the rule was uncertain.

"Progressive leaders fear that should Stengle be elected at the outset of the convention, District conservatives will gain control and force through a program of constitutional changes which would barely stop short at the expulsion of the so-called New Deal lodges.

Amendments Drafted.

Amendments are known to have been drafted which would place the progressive lodge in the district under the thumbs of the Washington members of the executive council, and which would change the method of delegating votes to the convention to increase the strength of the larger lodges. One revised constitution to be proposed omits all provisions for recall and automatically would abolish recall proceedings pending against the four Washington members of the council—National Treasurer Cecil E. Custer and Vice Presidents Ira Y. Bain, Michael D. Schaefer and G. Carroll Dimond.

With the vote on the presidential election rule likely to prove the first major test vote of the conference, leaders of the various factions caucused well into the night to rally their full strength. District progressives, who had held one caucus in the afternoon, held a second tonight.

The convention is to be opened tomorrow by Mayor Frank Couzens. Before the convention battle starts, Representative Robert Ramspeck, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, will address the delegates.

Ramspeck is expected to propose civil service for all Government employes, a civil service court of appeals and extension of classification into the field, and points expected to be drafted into the convention's legislative program.

He announced, however, that he would oppose the 30-year optional retirement and refused to commit himself on automatic promotions, two other proposed planks.

Shuns Internal Strife.

Ramspeck refused to be drawn into the internal strife, but pointed out that a sound legislative program would ease a good deal of the friction. Had a civil service board of appeals been in existence when the case of the Justice Lodge came up, he pointed out, all the unpleasantness that followed would have been avoided.

"The dismissed employes could have gotten a hearing before some impartial agency and that would have settled the matter," he said.

Ramspeck revealed that he had written to the President protesting the manner in which some administrators were enforcing the new leave bills. He said his letter cited specific abuses in the Inland Waterways and War Department in the transfer of employes hitherto on a regular monthly basis to an hourly basis to deprive them of leave.

Following Ramspeck's address, the committee on credentials, headed by pro-Stengle John Murray, vice president, from the Boston district, will report. There will be several cases of disputed delegations, one of which—that of the Railroad Retirement Board in the District—is expected to serve as a preliminary test vote to the Stengle strength.

Car Holds Up House It Smashed

Auto Crashes Into Brick House, Bears Weight of Loose Walls

Driver of Borrowed Vehicle, Taking Girl Injured in Previous Accident, Loses Control of Car; Building to Be 'Jacked Up' to Remove Sedan.

A 1929 sedan was all that was keeping three front rooms in the home of Miss Imogene Wormley, director of kindergartens in 47 colored elementary schools, from crashing into Florida avenue last night, after a succession of events started at 6 p. m. Saturday.

The sedan, a borrowed car, was taking a child injured in an accident to the hospital when it leaped the sidewalk of the street and buried itself in the brick walls of Miss Wormley's three-story home at 547 Florida avenue northwest.

Miss Wormley was out of town with her sister, Josephine, at the time. She received a telephone call telling her to come home. As she alighted from a street car the conductor told her she ought to stop and look at an accident up the street.

She proceeded up the street and found the car buried in her living room, with crowds of curious neighbors gathered around, and police warning them to keep their distance lest the whole front of the house collapse.

So badly cracked was the building police did not dare remove the car. It was left in place, wedged into the building, over the weekend until builders could be summoned this morning to jack up the walls and buttress the house so that the car could be extricated. Wide cracks extended to the third story. The weight of the loosened walls rested on the motor of the car. Its rear end blocked the sidewalk.

The driver of the car was Hoyt Arnold, colored, 27, of 142 Pierce street northwest. He had borrowed it from a friend, for a ride. According to Patrolman E. P. Hallman, of the Second Precinct, Arnold leaped from the car unhurt and dashed up the street.

He was chased by a group of neighbors who held him until a police squad car arrived and took him to the precinct station, where he was being held last night for investigation.

Arnold told police he had been taking an unidentified child to a hospital after an accident at Fourth and K streets in which the little girl had been hit by another car. He said that as he raced out of Sixth street across Florida avenue, his brakes failed and he was unable to stop the headlong plunge of the vehicle.

The girl was Lillian Jackson, 7, colored, of 1810 Rosedale avenue northwest. The Jackson girl had been lifted from the rear of the old sedan, put in a taxi by someone, and taken on to Fredeman's Hospital, where she was treated for cuts and slight bruises and released.

Michaux Reveals Emancipation Rite

Newport News, Va., Sept. 13 (AP).—Elder Solomon Lightfoot Michaux, colored member of a national committee to observe the emancipation of Negroes by President Lincoln, September 22, 1862, announced here tonight plans are complete for the celebration at Madison Square Garden in New York City on the eve of the anniversary, Monday, September 21.

Elder Michaux said Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Gov. Herbert W. Lehman of New York will appe.ar on the platform at the exercises scheduled to start at 3:30 p. m. Elder Michaux will direct his radio choir as a feature of the celebration.

The program will represent the eighty-fourth anniversary of freedom of the colored race in America, Elder Michaux said. Later in the evening it is expected President Roosevelt will address a message to American Negroes from 9:30 to 10 p. m.

Will Hike in Park.

Donald E. McHenry, National Capital parks naturalist, will conduct a hike through Glover-Archbold Park at 3 p. m. Wednesday. Nature students between 8 and 14 years old are invited to meet McHenry at Cathedral and New Mexico avenues northwest at 2:45 p. m.

3 Men Hurt When Auto Overturns; Trolley Hits Pedestrian.

4 Are Taken to Hospital After Collision on Defense Highway.

Seventeen persons were treated at local hospitals yesterday for injuries suffered in traffic accidents in or near the city.

Upperman was treated as Casualty Hospital and his companion was taken to Providence Hospital. Franklin P. Pettitt, 22, of 1353 Wisconsin avenue northwest, driver of the car, was cut. He refused hospital treatment. Police said the car failed to make the turn, ran off the road and then overturned.

Wade Comer, colored, 28, of 1519 Ninth street northwest, escaped with minor injuries when he was knocked down by a trolley car at Fifty-sixth and Dix street northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital. Police said the trolley was operated by Floyd Little, of 213 H street northwest.

Edna Wilson, colored, 15, of 101 H street southeast, was treated at Sibley Hospital for slight cuts on her face suffered when the car in which she was riding was in collision with a parked automobile in the 100 block Myrtle street northeast Cora Wilson, colored, 23, of the H street address, driver of the car, was charged with operating without a District permit.

Four persons were injured in a collision on the Defense highway at Bowie road near Mitchellsville, Md. They were brought to Casualty Hospital for treatement by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad.

William Heuer, 41, and his wife Catherine, 31, of Balnew, Md., suffered cuts. Catherine Barber, 28, also of Balnew, suffered a severe head injury, and James Bounds, 39, of Baltimore, suffered a fractured right ankle.

Three occupants of the other car were hurt. They were John D. Ray, colored, of Bennings, D. C., bruises; his daughter, Dorothy Ray, a fractured left arm, and Marion Blue, of Silver Spring, bruises.

Montgomery County policemen, Paul Watkins and Harry Merson, took the injured to the sanitarium for treatment, aided by the Silver Spring Rescue Squad.

Henry Baker, 24, of Gaithersburg, and Craig Woodward, 21, of Rockville, were cut and bruised when their motorcycle collided with a car operated, police said, of E. R. Codwise, of Gaithersburg.

Orphaned by Virginia Motor Crash

Neighbors Take Food Offerings As Crash Orphans Six Children

Youngsters Play on Into Darkness Until Hunger Cries of One Attracts Kindly Woman; Parents Killed in Virginia Truck Accident.

Meals haven't been too regular, nor too plentiful, for the five Tomkinson children who live in the rear of 1300 Fourth street southwest.

From Junior, who is 12, to Freddie, who is 3, they've known how to play on their sidewalk playlot through supper time, and then on until darkness brought bedtime.

So there was nothing unusual about Saturday night—when the neighbor children went home to eat, and no call came for them. They romped on over the brick pavement.

Then it got dark, and it did seem strange that mother wasn't there to call them in. And Freddie began to cry.

Five Hushed to Sleep.

Mrs. Wade came over from the adjoining apartment and Freddie, sobbing, said he was hungry. Mrs. Wade had "a few snacks" left from supper, brought them over, hushed all five to sleep—then put out the oil lamp "so it wouldn't set the rooms on fire."

. . . It was too late to make any difference to the youngsters in bed, when the news came. James Corley, their uncle, was home then and he took it . . .

Mrs. Bertha Tompkinson, 31, their mother, had died almost instantly in an automobile accident early in the evening at Fredericksburg, Va.

Earl Tompkinson, 33, their father, died shortly after midnight at the Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg. He was driving the truck in which he and Mrs. Tompkinson had left home Saturday morning. It was sideswiped by a passing truck, forced off the road and into a tree.

Two Held After Crash.

Virginia State police last night were holding James Morgan, 20, of the 1700 block I street northwest, Washington, driver of the truck, and his companion, L. B. McCarty, 20, of Detroit.

Morgan and McCarty are to have a preliminary hearing in Spottsylvania Courthouse this morning. There were no charges against them, but officers said Morgan probably would be booked for "involuntary manslaughter." McCarty is held on the order of Judge Frederick W. Coleman as a material witness.

Morgan told the police that when passing the Tompkinson truck he heard something scrape, and turning around saw the truck leave the road and strike a tree. Morgan and McCarty stopped, picked up the Tompinksons and took them to the hospital.

Couple Was Separated.

Tompkinson, who used his truck to collect junk, and his wife separated last spring. The mother and her six children—one of them spent the summer in North Colina—went to live at 1300 Fourth street. They had three small rooms there, and Mrs. Tompkinson's brother, James Corley, lived there, too, and from odd jobs he's been able to get, kept them all in the necessities of life.

Once in a while, Corley said last night, the father came for the mother, and the two went off in the truck. Saturday's trip, he said, was on business in Virginia.

When the children—Junior, Clarence, Jack, Ruby, Aloha Jean and Freddie—awoke yesterday morning, they didn't know just what the news that was bringing in all the neighbors, meant. But they were hungry. They wanted breakfast.

"Uncle Jim" didn't have any money.

"But the neighbors were fine," he related last night. "They started bringing in some things. And I went down to see Mr. Neligh at the Neighborhood House (half a block away) and he gave me a dollar to buy some breakfast.

"Ate Up Everything."

"The kids ate up everything I got."

Last night that part of "Uncle Jim's" problem was temporarily solved. The orphaned children were lodged comfortably in the Receiving Home for Children.

He still didn't know where he'd get money to bring the bodies of the dead parents back from Fredericksburg—although he'd made some arrangements with a local undertaker. The mother had an insurance policy—"but she was afraid the children might do something to it if she left it in the house. So she took it with her Saturday. Both that and her purse, in which she had a small amount of money, couldn't be found in the wreckage of the accident," said the brother.

AAA Urges Auto Course For Schools

Mrs. Doyle Is Sent Letter by Club Asking for Safety Instruction.

'Testing' Trailer Off on Tour of the Country After Debut Here.

A "testing" trailer—with a battery of machines and apparatus to determine driving ability—left Washington last week on a tour of the Nation, and thousands of motorists over the country will submit in the next few months to stringent tests of their driving ability. The trailer was outfitted by the American Automobile Association in this city and made its debut a few weeks ago in the Capital.

The equipment was developed by the AAA as a part of its expanded program and will be exhibited through affiliated motor clubs.

Meanwhile, here in the city, a drive under auspices of the automobile association was under way for establishment of a course in safe automobile operation in senior high schools.

The District Motor Club, local branch of the AAA, has written a letter, it was learned, to Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, in which the organization asked that driving education be established in Washington schools.

The letter, written by Richard M. Ham, representing the club, outlined a course which would include several hours of classroom instruction in safety rules, needs of road and city traffic regulation.

Mrs. Doyle, promised "serious consideration."

Special instructors, with automomobiles, would be furnished, Ham promised Mrs. Doyle.

During the past summer, such a course of instruction was tried out in a special class at Pennsylvania State College. The course was under the instruction of Amos E. Neyhart, professor of industrial engineering, who has specialized in driver-training work and who is now in Washington on leave from the college to perfect and establish the course in high schools throughout the country.

H. O. Stickney, Retired Naval Officer, Dead

Admiral, Veteran of 1898 War, Was in Race for Congress Seat.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 13.—Rear Admiral H. O. Stickney, United States Navy, retired, died this afternoon at the Naval Hospital in Portsmouth, where he had been under treatment for several days for a kidney ailment and complications.

Admiral Stickney was the Republican candidate for Congress from the Second Virginia District.

He was born December 10, 1867, in Pepperel, Mass., and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, in 1888.

He was promoted to Rear Admiral on December 22, 1919, and was retired on December 27, 1921.

He served on the U. S. S. Iowa during the Spanish-American War and on the U. S. S. Princeton during the Philippine Insurrection.

He was assigned to duty at the Naval Academy in 1905-06. He was inspector in charge of the Fourth Lighthouse District, Philadelphia, from 1910 to 1912. He was administrator of customs at Vera Cruz, Mexico, in 1914, and was named to the Board of Inspection and Survey in Washington in 1919. He was senior member of the Pacific Coast board of inspection at San Francisco in 1919.

After his retirement from the service, Admiral Stickney was admitted to the Virginia bar June 27, 1923.

He was nominated for Congress by the Second District Republican convention held at Princess Anne Courthouse on April 4, and would have opposed Norman R. Hamilton, Portsmouth publisher, the Democratic nominee, in the November election.

Giants, Cards Split As Record Throng Of 64,400 Watches

Mel Ott's 2 Homers Help New York Win Opener, 8-4, and Preserve 3½-Game Lead as Dean Saves Finale, 4-3, With Aid of Homer by Mize.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 13.—Amid the tumult and the roar of the mightiest crowd ever to witness a National League baseball game, an overflow crowd of 64,417 that packed the Polo Grounds to the rafters, the league-leading New York Giants split a spectacular double-header today with their foremost challengers, the St. Louis Cardinals.

Rushing to the rescue of the faltering Roy Parmelee in the eighth inning of the final game, the great Dizzy Dean saved an even break for he crippled "Gashouse Gang" after the Giants had pinned their ears back with an 8-4 victory in the opener, with the aid of two homers by Mel Ott.

Dean, pitching in his third game in two straight days, turned back the home team with the tying run on second base in each of the last two innings. His brilliant relief job protected a one-run margin, clinched a 4-3 decision for the Cardinals that was due mainly to Johnny Mize's homer with two on, and kept alive what's left of the furious pennant battle.

Cubs 5 Games Back.

Fighting hard for a double triumph that would have all but ended lingering doubt about the championship outcome, the Giants nevertheless preserved their lead of 3½ games over the Cardinals, with the last game of the series due tomorrow. Meanwhile, the Chicago Cubs, by dividing two games in Brooklyn, remained five behind, in third place. The Giants now have 14 games left to play, the Cards 13 and the Cubs 12.

The league leaders outplayed, but failed to outgame the harassed, battle-worn Cardinals, whose patched-up batting order included only three survivors of their 1934 championship machine, outside the box. After slugging out an easy victory in the first game, behind the seven-hit pitching of Fred Fitzsimmons, the Giants lacked finishing power in the pinches in the bitterly fought second encounter, to the intense annoyance of a crowd that finally became almost too unruly to handle.

The demonstration by spectators reached its height in the fifth inning of the second game, when the Giants filled the bases with one out, but failed to score.

50,000 Turned Away.

A September snowstorm of torn programs and papers filled the air, littered half the field and caused a temporary suspension of hostilities. Appeals from the umpires and announcers only partially checked the disturbance, but the game was finished with nothing more untoward than the invasion of the Cardinals bull pen in the eighth inning, by a woman spectator who lifted a heavy roll-up door to gain the field. Police escorted her from the park.

The crowd overflowed every available bit of seating or standing room in the entire park. Dozens among the 15,000 standees sought perches in the steel girders. Gates to the Polo Grounds were closed shortly after 11 a. m., nearly three hours before the first game. Police estimated nearly 50,000 persons were turned away. Thousands remained in the vicinity of the park, getting the returns on the rebound.

The outpouring, all told, surpassed anything ever seen in the vicinity of Coogan's Bluff. The attendance figure wiped out the previous Polo Grounds as well as National League record, 63,800, set during a double-header between the Giants and Dodgers on Decoration Day, 1935.

210 Amateurs Ready for Tourney

46 Draw First Round Byes in National Title Play at Long Island.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Garden City Golf Club, Garden City, Long Island, Sept. 13.—An international field of 210 golfers stood poised tonight for the opening tomorrow of golfdom's annual hysteria, known as the National Amateur All-Match Play Championship.

From Scotland to California have come the greats and near greats to battle for the crown which burly Lawson Little relinquished when he stepped out of the amateur picture into professional ranks back in April.

Not all of the golfers will see action tomorrow. Forty-six—who drew first-round byes—will hang around and watch 164 competitors play first matches.

No Topnotch Matches.

The 84 inaugural battles offer little to get excited about. No famous golfers are meeting in the opening round, but the chances are a couple of rank outsiders will knock off a favorite or two.

Godman, well liked by the experts in view of his brilliant play in the Walker Cup matches at Pine Valley, his recent victory over the so-called uncrowned champion, Johnny Dawson, in the Arcola invitation, plays one Hunter Hicks, of Chicago.

A semi-finalist last year, talked about as the next best thing to Little in this country, Goodman still remembers how a 16-year-old boy, Bobby Jacobson, beat him in the first round of the 1933 Amateur at Brookline.

Ouimet Draws Bye.

Johnny Fischer's opponent is Eddie Meister, an alternate from Cleveland. Scotty Campbell opposes a Washintgon, D. C., golfer, Forrest Thompson, and Charlie Yates draws Dick Jones, of New York, who once gave Bobby Jones quite a fight in the National Amateur quarter-finals.

Walter Emery, the fall pine from Oklahoma, Walker Cup star and 1935 Amateur finalist, faces Knox Young, of Pittsburgh in what should prove an interesting match, and Fred Haas, the 20-year-old Louisianan, fresh from a victory in the Canadian Amateur, has his work cut out in a sortie with Carlie Mayo, a New Yorker.

Most of the other name golfers have drawn byes, Francis Ouimet, Walker Cup captain, and Frank Strafaci, former National Public Links champion, have breathers in the first quarter. Dr. William Tweddell, British Walker Cup captain, Sandy Somerville, the Canadian who won the title four years ago, are byes in the second quarter; George Voigt, former Washington star, in the third quarter, and George Dunlap, jr., 1933 champion, in the fourth quarter.

Eight Local Entries.

The Nation's Capital tonight pinned its hopes on eight golfers—strongest contingent ever to represent Washington in this important championship.

Foremost challenger is Roger Peacock, of Congressional, who today twisted loose from the debris of a couple of bad rounds to sound out with a 75, which is good golf for this 6,808-yard par 73 course, regarded by many as tougher than Pine Valley.

Peacock doesn't play tomorrow, but come Tuesday the former District titleholder will engage the British ace, Tweddell.

Another District luminary, Claude Rippey, runner-up for the National Public Links championship, opens fire against M. H. Ward, of Tacoma, Wash., and is favored to win.

Rippey Gets 72.

Rippy's practice rounds have been similar to those at Bethpage, where he tied for the medal and then went on to the finals. He has had 71, 73, 75, 72, being one under par for the four rounds—golf which will send him a long ways at Garden City. Rippy's 72 today was a gem, including three birdies on the back nine.

Levi Yoder, Middle Atlantic champion, Francis Ouimet's conquerer last year, snapped out of it today, reporting a 74. Yoder takes on C. Bayard Mitchell, one of Pine Valley's hot shots.

330-Pound Tackle Is Bulk of Squad

By the Associated Press.

Thatcher, Ariz., Sept. 13.—Coach Johnny Riggs, of Gila Junior College, has plenty of line material—all of it in one man.

His big threat at tackle is 330-pound Bill Cudd.

"If I can fit him into the line we'll look like a 12-man team," Coach Riggs said.

The first difficulty was to provide Cudd with a uniform.

The college domestic arts department came to the rescue and all hands are busy constructing a suit for the young giant. Shoes, headgear and knee and shoulder pads still remain unsolved problems.

Purdue Gridman Dies, 5 Burned After Blaze

CARL DAHLBECK, Purdue University football player, who died yesterday from injuries received when a heater stove exploded in the university's shower room.

Dressing Room Fire Is Started by Gasoline, Lasts 30 Seconds.

By the Associated Press.

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 13.—Purdue University's hopes for a championship football team this year were buried in gloom and sorrow today with one member of the squad dead and five others suffering from severe burns received in a shower room explosion of gasoline yesterday.

Carl E. Dahlbeck, of Lyndonville, Vt., regular guard, died in a hospital here today. He was burned seriously in the blast but at the hospital his death was said to have been due to shock and toxemia.

Tom McGannon, of Evansville, Ind., brilliant halfback, was reported to be in a serious condition but physicians expressed belief he will recover. Lowell Becker, of Reading, Mich., another regular on the squad, also was in a serious condition. Pat Malaska, of Crawfordsville, Ind., and John Drake and James Maloney, both of Chicago, were less seriously burned.

Dahlbeck, Drake, Decker, and McGannon had been counted on as regulars from the 1936 team. Maloney is a promising sophomore and Malaska, better known for his work on the basketball team last year, was trying out for a halfback position.

Although the Boilermakers' first game of the season—with Ohio University—is only two weeks away, sorrow over the tragedy allowed for only slight concern over the prospects for the season.

Coach Noble Kizer said, "Carl was a star football player which counts for little—but he was a high-class young man, which means everything. I can't say what our plans will be just yet. Our squad feels this tragic happening more than any outsider can realize."

The explosion occurred as the players were dressing after the afternoon practice session. They had used gasoline to remove tape from their feet and ankles and when it was washed off it formed a coating over the water on the floor. Heat from a hot-water heater ignited the fumes and in an instant the flames spread over the entire floor.

Players said the fire lasted less than 30 seconds. As they started to run to safety Dahlbeck slipped and fell, dislocating his shoulder. He was burned about the body as he lay on the floor.

Dahlbeck's parents were notified immediately after the fire, and his mother was reported to be en route here from Vermont. Funeral arrangements will not be made until she arrives.

The explosion recalled another tragedy in which a Purdue football team was involved. On October 31, 1903, the team, en route to Indianapolis for the annual game with Indiana University, was in a train wreck and a score of the members of the squad were killed and several others injured.

Among those hurt in that wreck was Harry Leslie, who later became Governor of Indiana.

Eagles Defeat Giants, 10-7, in Opener

Reese's Field Goal Late in Game Climaxes Drive; Smukler Stars.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.—Hank Reese's field goal with 4 minutes to play gave the Philadelphia Eagles a 10-to-7 victory over the champion New York Giants in the opener of the National Professional Football League today.

Nearly 30,000 saw Reese, former Temple University player, culminate a goal-line drive by dropping back from his center position twice successively to boot goals from placement on the 13-yard line. The first was nullified when the Eagles were ruled offside.

Dave Smukler, another erstwhile Temple athlete, made his professional debut with the outstanding individual performance of the day.

Smukler shot a 19-yard pass to Manske, who lateraled it to Carter on the Giants' 20 in the first period. Carter then squirmed past several tacklers to the goal line, a 39-yard advance. Smukler added the extra point from placement.

It was Smukler again who tossed a 43-yard aerial to Manske to start the winning drive. The Giants stiffened on the 3-yard marker and Reese made his boot.

The Giants scored early in the fourth after a 54-yard drive, which ended with Ed Danowski tossing a 10-yard pass to Burnett.

Smith Shoots an Ace At Sherwood Forest

One more man named Smith has added his name to the elite list of miracle golfers by sinking a hole-in-one.

It was an iron shot made on the 183-yard No. 3 hole on the Sherwood Forest Course by Harry S. Smith, of Washington, who was playing with a group of members, William Kaufholz, Carrol McGuire and R. H. Creagle, also of this city.

Old Dominion Crew Bows to Potomac

Single Men Beat Benedict Aarsmen; Gude Rows in 4 of Meet Events.

By John R. Vosburgh.

The old Potomac echoed to the stirring "Stroke, Stroke, Stroke" of eight-oared crews yesterday—even as it did early in the century when Georgetown blades cleaved the water.

Frankly, it was pretty ragged rowing and it only lasted half a mile, but it was worth seeing. It was worth going up the river to see that Potomac Boat Club srew sweep through the arches of the Key Bridge, winner by close to a length over an Old Dominion Boat Club eight of Alexandria.

There is something about crew racing which fires the blood of any sports fan who has seen much of it and when husky Ernie Buff, Syracuse University oarsman two years ago, stroked the Potomac crew to victory, it made a sight which ought to be seen more on the Potomac.

The entire Potomac crew came out shortly afterward and rowed another hard sprint race—for supremacy between the married men and the single men. The married men, stroked by the veteran Granville Gude, were going great guns until the last 100 yards. At one time, they led by close to a length.

Married Men Tire.

Buff, the young college grad, was the stroke for the single men, however, and all the time they were pulling along smoothly and at a lower stroke than the Benedicts. The married men seemed to get a little tired in the last 100 yards or so and the more rythmic single men shot past then like the Queen

Nats, Chisox Play Two Games Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—The scheduled double-header between Washington and Chicago was rained out here today. The teams will play the delayed games tomorrow with the same two pitchers who were slated to work today doing duty on the mound.

Washington will start Pete Appleton, who was to have pitched today, and Buck Newsom, in the deferred twin bill.

The White Sox, now in second place, are only one and one-half games ahead of the Nats who, with only 13 games remaining in their schedule, regard the Chicago series as crucial in their fight for second place.

Havre de Grace Racing Opens On Friday

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 12.—Roman Soldier, 4-year-old son of Cohort and Miamba, candidate for the $10,000 Havre de Grace Handicap, heads the string of seven which Trainer Phil Reuter moved in here for the Harford Agricultural and Breeders Association's 11-day fall meeting, which opens at 2:15 p. m. Friday.

Reuter always has been exceedingly lucky in garnering purses at this track. He said upon his arrival that his horses are all ready to go to the races, therefore trainers, who have been eyeing the $10,000 stake on September 30, had better not overlook Roman Soldier in the mile and one-eighth classic.

Trainer Louis Feustel came down from Suffolk Downs, Mass., with the J. W. Y. Martin string, which includes Dark Hope, also a candidate for the Havre de Grace Handicap. Feustel admits that Dark Hope, 7-year-old brown son of Traumer and Dinahmeur, didn't run to expectations up North the past summer, but says the horse, who has enjoyed a nice rest, will come into his own during the racing here. In addition to Dark Hope, Feustel will campaign five others of Martin's band during the 11 days' sport.

There are close to 500 horses on the grounds. Among the trainers who can be seen on the track early each morning putting their charges through their paces are George Conway, with the Glen Riddle Farm's string; Charlie Feltner, with the horses of Kenneth N. Gilpin and Mrs. E. L. Bull; Harry Baker, in charge of E. K Bryson and Ray Bryson's thoroughbreds; Bill Mulholland, with the Brandywine Stable's horses; former Jockey Louis Schaefer; Peter E. Fitzgerald, with the string belonging to Mayor Frank Hayes, of Waterbury, Conn.; Pete Clausen, William Brooks; A. S. Todd; James V. Stewart, Nathan Swart; George Riola; Maj. G. L. Stryker; Elmer Trueman, and Dr. J. Fred Adams.

With three $10,000 stakes to be run in 11 days, with the minimum purse $1,000, American and Canadian horsemen are more anxious to race here this fall than at any time in the past 10 years.

Long Reign Seen for Alice Marble

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 13.—A reign, probably as long as the one enjoyed by the player she succeeded, seems in store for Alice Marble, of San Francisco, the new National Women's tennis champion.

Alternating from deep forcing drives and delicately executed drop-and-trap shots that barely cleared the net, Miss Marble ended the four-year tenure enjoyed by Helen Hull Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., yesterday in three vivid sets.

Miss Marble's triumph over the all-England champion laid the foundation for a good argument in the matter of determining the Nation's No. 1 star for 1936. Normally victory in the national championship is tantamount to the top-ranking destination, but when the power of the United States Lawn Tennis Association asesmble in January, it is going to be difficult to overlook Miss Jacobs' victory at Wimbledon and her conquest of Miss Marble at Manchester, N. H., last month.

The British Lawn Tennis Association was confronted with a similar problem a year ago when America's Helens Jacobs and Moody reached the final of the all-England tournament. Instead of choosing between Kay Stammers and Dorothy Round, the B. L. T. A. ranked them alike, sharing the No. 1 berth.

The all-England title generally is recognized as the world championship, since the tournament has a wider representation of international players than the American championship, but seldom has one player so definitely outclassed another as did Miss Marble over Miss Jacobs.

She rated herself cautiously against her rivals in the preliminary rounds to such an extent that experts were blind to her real potentialities, which were so predominant in 1934 when she was forced out of competition due to illness. But after a few minutes against Miss Jacobs the experts realized that what had happened before was just a carefully concealed plan.

The tournament did not bring to light any player capable of stopping Miss Marble inside of a couple of years. Miss Jacobs said she'll be back next year, but its unlikely she'll be able to recapture the crown. The Berkeley veteran looks to have passed her peak.

While a new champion was crowned in the women's division an old one was recrowned in the men's as Fred Perry, of England, winner in 1933 and 1934, turned back a gallant challenge from Donald Budge, of Oakland, Calif., in an heroic five-set match, 2—6, 6—3, 8—6, 1—6, 10—8.

The 22-year-old Californian acquitted himself admirably against the world's greatest amateur, twice being within two points of victory in the fifth set. But Perry, who had been outplayed most of the time, showed his courage, backed up by the right shots, and stemmed off the challenge decisively and spectacularly.

Budge probably never played finer tennis in his meteoric career and there's every reason to believe that with another year or two's experience, he'll achieve his ambition. For Perry itwas the greatest victory of his career since he became the first foreigner to win the title three times.

Feller Fans 17 To Set Mark; Indians Beat Macks Twice

Rookie's Feat Shatters League Record, Ties Dizzy Dean's Mark.

Hurler Gives Up 2 Hits, Wins, 5-2

Galehouse Wins Second, 5-4, to Best Fink in a Seven-Hit Duel.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 13.—Bob Feller, husky high school rookie from Adel, Iowa, wound up under a dark sky at League Park today and blazed his fast one past the Philadelphia Athletics to strike out 17 batters and allow only two hits, as the Cleveland Indians won both games of a double-header.

That was one more strikeout than Rube Waddell achieved 28 years ago when he set the American League record, which stood until today. It also put Feller's name beside that of Dizzy Dean as co-holder of the major league record.

Feller's two-hit pitching gave the Indians the first game, 5 to 2, and they came back in the second game to win, 5 to 4.

The farm boy from Iowa, who learned how to throw by pegging at a makeshift backstop in a cow pasture, walked the first man to face him and then struck out the next three batters. He struck out at least two batters in every inning but the fourth and ninth. In the first and sixth he fanned three.

He struck out every man on the Philadelphia team but Moss, a pinch hitter, who walked. He walked nine altogether, hit one man and made a wild pitch.

Galehouse and Fink each allowed seven hits in the second game, but a four-run rally in the seventh inning put the game away for Cleveland.

7,000 Watch Shady Grove Drub Heurich, 11-4, Even Title Series

Adair Victor As Brewers Hit Hard

Deciding Game for A Section Crown Is Set for Next Sunday.

Shady Grove Barbecue roasted the Heurich Brewers to a turn yesterday. While 7,000 fans kept a small army of park police busy on the South Ellipse, the Barbecuers outslugged the Brewers for an 11-to-4 victory and deadlocked their series for the Section A championship of The Post Association's National City League.

The deciding game of the series will be played next Sunday. The Brewers took the first game, 9 to 1, but ran up against a different team yesterday. Manager Eddie Dove, recently out of the hospital after recuperating from a broken leg suffered in a ball game, was back on the coaching line for the first time and saw his club get off to a 3-to-0 lead in the first inning.

A single by Leo Hilleary, a pass to Bill Bryant, a single by Tommy Nolan and a double by Len Roberts got the Barbecuers off to a flying start. Pitcher Adger (Giggles) Adair, of Shady Grove, then proceeded to show how he could allow a dozen hits and still protect his lead.

Russell Chased.

Some fast traveling on the bases by Bill Shelton after drawing a walk in the second gave Heurich its first run when Fee Collier drove out a long single, but a Heurich error, a double by Bryant and Hardin's single gave Shady Grove the run back in the fourth. Successive singles by Adair, Hilleary, Bryant and Harding gave the Barbecuers three more in the sixth and it was all over, but the shouting.

Adair, meanwhile, was getting out of difficulty with men on bases by effective pitching and smooth support. A couple of double-plays blasted Heurich rallies. Tillie Scott, former Mount Rainier High star, was the staud-out for the Barbecuers, handling ten chances at shortstop without an error. Tommy Thompson was the big threat for the Brewers at the plate, collecting two singles and a double.

Bill Albert, Shady Grove right-fielder, socked a double and a home run; the latter coming in the eighth inning after Tommy Nolan had singled.

The Barbecue boys knocked Everett Russell out of the box in the fifth inning and continued to pound away on Wild Bob Lyons' offerings to the finish.

Bankers, Treasury Will Battle Today

The city championship weekday play-offs of The Post Sandlot Association will resume today on the South Ellipse when National Savings & Trust Co. collides with Treasury Acocunts and Deposits at 4 p. m. The teams, champions of the Bankers and Sports Center Government Leagues, respectively, played a 4-4 tie their first time out.

Due to withdrawal of the Department Store League representatives because of lack of a champion, Bureau of Investigation, scheduled to play today, will not play until Friday. On that date, it will play Miller Furniture in a second round tussle.

Procurement Division, Federal AA champs, and Potomac Electric Power Co., National Capital eLague winners, will clash into tomorrow's only game. They played to a tie Friday. Starting Wednesday, two games a day will be played, utilizing the North and South Ellipse.

Kann Defeats Hecht, Addles Playoffs

Win Produe seStore Loop Tie, No Foe for Series Tilt With G-Men.

The Kann & Sons ball club performed the two-fold feat yesterday of beating the Hecht Co., 11 to 4, and forcing the Department Store League to drop out of The Post Sandlot Association week-day playoffs.

Because the result put the Kann team in a tie with Hecht's for the second-half championship and because the Department League champions are scheduled to play today in the weekday play-offs, the circuit is unable to go through with its game with Bureau of Investigation, since it has no champion.

Investigation thus advances by a forfeit and must play Miller Furniture Friday, in the second round. Whether the Department Store League, which has played some games on Sundays, will be allowed to play in the Sunday play-offs is a question to be decided.

The four-hit pitching of Bell was directly responsible for the Hecht defeat and end of its hopes to get in the play-offs after having won the first half championship. The Hechtmen were coasting along on a 4-1 lead as the result of the two-hit pitching of Bill Mitchell when Kann's began converting his slants into base hits.

Two walks by Mitchell, an error and a couple of hits allowed Kann's to tie the score at 4-4 in this frame. In the seventh, Knocky Thomas led off with a homer, and Lefty Chumbris tripled to start off a five-run rally before Wolfe and McMenamin, relief pitchers, were able to halt the spree.

Bell improved as the game went along, after allowing three runs in the first, and the Hechtmen were effectively throttled to the finish.

Dutch Bergman's '50 Scoring Plays' Off the Presses

Fifty Scoring Plays, "Dutch" Bergman's initial venture in literary endeavor, is off the presses and a nice little football manuscript it is, although the work as a whole embodies more diagramming than writing. Bound in loose-leaf notebook style, with an attractive illustrated cover, the book will be available for public consumption tomorrow.

The 50 plays are contributions of the Nation's leading coaches. Familiar and important names, such as Lou Little, "Jock" Sutherland, "Chick" Meehan, Bill Spaulding, Dr. Marvin Stevens, Lynn Waldorf, Glenn Warner(Fritz Crisler, Tom Hamilton, Dick Harlow, Bernie Bierman and Andy Kerr, are included among the donors. Each play is supposed to be one of the contributor's pet scoring offenses, although it is noted that that of Marchie Schwartz, Creighton coach has failed to score although it has gained many valuable yards.

It is interesting to note, too, that "Potsy" Clarke, coach of the champion Detroit Lions, and Steve Owen, New York Giants mentor, have a couple of powerful pro plays listed. Owen's, incidentally, was used in the All-American game at New York a week ago and is one of the best in the book.

We might add that Teddy Hughes, while coaching Gallaudet College back in 1922 and around that time, employed the play outlined by John Da Grosa with considerable success. Another old-timer, the cobwebby "Statue of Liberty," also is in the book, with an editorial notation that it "still works."

A. S. Barnes & Co. are the publishers.

George's Radio vs. West End Laundry (Sunday).

Simpson's Pharmacy drew half a game ahead of its bitter rival, George's Radio, in the National City Junior race of The Post Sandlot Association by taking a 4-to-2 decision on the South Ellipse yesterday. Lefty Arnold Heft, Central High ace, bested Lefty Walter Stockwell, of Eastern High, in a pitchers' duel.

George's has a chance to tie for first place by beating West End Laundry, Sunday. A victory for West End will give Simpson's the second-half championship and qualify it for the play-off with J. C. Flood Plumbers, first-half winners. If George's win, it must play Simpson's a one-game play-off for the second-half title.

Ed McDonough, of Central High, led the Simpson drive with three hits, while Heft was holding the Radio boys to five. Players from Central, Roosevelt, Western and Woodrow Wilson High schools comprise the Simpson line-up.

In another league game, Police Boys Club defeated the Pep Boys, 9 to 3, as Cuddy allowed the losers but four hits while his club was getting 14.

15,600 Watch Pirate Pros Win, 10-0

Kakasic, Rookie, Scores 9 Points in Opener With Boston.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 13.—The Pittsburgh Pirates opened the National League professional football season today under a wilting summer sun with a 10-to-0 victory over the Boston Redskins. The official paid attendance was 15,622.

Husky George Kakasic, a substitute left guard and kicker, accounted for 9 of the Pirates' 10 points. He is fresh from collegiate football, coming from Duquesne University to play his first professional game. Near the end of the second quarter, Kakasic scooped up Ed Smith's fumble on Boston's 26 and ran for the only touchdown of the game.

He accounted for 3 more points early in the final quarter after the Pirate attack stalled on the Redskins' 22-yard line. Kakasic dropped back to the 30 and with Dick Matesic holding the ball, sent a field goal through the uprights.

Capt. Armand Niccolai scored the other Pirate point with a place kick after Kakasic's touchdown.

Capt. Niccolai went into the game in the second quarter to attempt a field goal and dislocated his shoulder.

Maranville, as Pilot, Brings Title to Elmira

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 13 (AP).—Walter (Rabbit) Maranville, who in his 24 years in the major leagues was known as one of the greatest "money" players, brought the second half New York-Pennsylvania League pennant to Elmira today in the first year of his managership.

Elmira will meet the first half winners, the Scranton Miners, in a seven-game play-off.

Maranville, who is 44, suffered a leg injury that put him out of the big leagues during an exhibition game of the Boston Braves in 1934. He played 120 games for Elmira. He covered second and batted .320 until his leg forced him to retire to the bench.

Time Out! By Chet Smith

"This one goes to the club pro."

One More Week - - -

By Ben Dulaney.

The subtle touch of the artists of ballyhoo seemed to be upon that little tableau acted by Jesse "I-Won't-Go-To-Sweden" Owens Saturday. You know, he'd presumably signed a contract a couple of weeks ago to become a Broadway hoofer and personality man. Then he heeled about and applied for return of his amateur standing, humbly asked the haughty moguls of the A. A. U. to let him run without pay.

But whether or not the urging toes of press agents booted Jesse into the sanctum of Daniel J. Ferris, it remains that the smiling athlete now finds himself a professional throughout the world—except in Ohio—despite the fact that he's never performed an overt professional act. In his home territory loyal officials announce he's still pure, an edict which carries just about as much weight as a justice of the peace proclaiming that the United States had merged with Italy.

The Olympics (with aftermath) have complicated this whole amateur business so much that maybe the recent suggestion made by Col. Madison Square Garden Kilpatrick wasn't so radical after all.

"It's time we ran our teams as a Federal proposition," enunciated the Colonel, climbing down a gangplank. "We should select someone to devote all his time to the job and decide on our entries now and prepare to send them to the next Olympics and not wait until the last month and look around for a Santa Claus."

The Colonel's proposition could be enlarged and perfected, polished and trimmed into a first-rate political issue.

Starting right at the top, we'd have a secretary of athletics, one more member of the cabinet to have offices and employ people and issue statements and make speeches. Who? Why, Avery Brundage, of course. What other man has so ably demonstrated his complete command of the athletic situation. What other citizen can lay down the law with such pluperfect finality, issue binding edicts at the drop of a fedora?

Now Mr. Brundage could appoint undersecretaries for each sport—football, table tennis, horse shows, water polo and so on—and give them unlimited licensing and sanctioning power. That is, if the Undersecretary of Football, for instance, happened to be a Cornell man and Colgate wandered in one day and whaled the tar out of Cornell, he could suspend Colgate for losing Cornell students' money and all bets would be declared off.

Best feature of the proposition would be that all amateur athletes would be Federally sanctioned, that is they'd pay a $5 fee for the privilege of sweating and undergo an annual purity inspection.

That five-buck license would mount up to quite a large chunk of cash and might be doled out to all the colleges and clubs, sort of pro rata, so that all the best athletes could have room, board and spending money.

After this set-up had begun to roll along, let woe surround the recalcitrant athlete who wouldn't go to Sweden or who drank a champagne cocktail before retiring. We'd have real discipline then, without Mr. Brundage sitting behind his mahogany desk pushing buttons that could call the whole United States Marines to stand behind him if necessary.

The Amateur Athletic Union has ever been a tolerant, tactful and farseeing organization and, had it the power of the Supreme Court behind it, the Nation's sportminded could be assured that no balking muscleman would receive really harsh treatment. Even for major cases, such as those of Owens and Mrs. Jarrett, a year in jail would be sufficient, while for college and high school huskies perhaps a mere 30-day stretch on the chain-gang would lead them to the light, teach them that the A. A. U. comes first, should be placed upon its rightful pedastal high above such mundane hankerings as health, contentment and peace of mind.

So now once again in a Presidential year politics and sport nuzzle up to one another in a kindship not nearly as odd as might be supposed. Jack Dempsey whoops it up for the Democrats in good old Maine and the rafters ring with more cheers from more throats than would yell for the entire brain trust on one platform. Walter Johnson mounts the stand at a wee Republican rally near his Maryland farm and his likeness is sent for and wide over the wires. Owens declares for Landon and the Harlem vote getters yell in glee.

Yes, the epeople like a show, a show with fanfare and fireworks and struggle. They live for the few white-hot thrills of living dusted across a gray besotted sky. They anticipate the lightning and thunder—and perhaps a little blood now and then. And whether it's football or boxing or an election or a crooked dime wheel at a county fair they squeel and holler and take a holiday.

Mr. Barnum knew that.

Managoff to Meet Cox on Thursday

Ivan Managoff and Joe Cox, featured wrestlers on the Joe Turner card next Thursday night will release their groans, grunts and burps in very lovely surroundings as the industry moves back into the Turner Arena at Fourteenthand W streets—a Turner Arena which has been greatly improved.

For instance, in the nature of improvements, Turner has spent some $1,500 installing special ventilating devices which are planned to completely remove any and all smoke.

Part of the elevated stands have been removed to make room for more ringside seats. There now will be 1,000 ringside pews instead of the 300 or so that were in the arena prior to the renovation and reconstruction.

In a 45-minute semifinal, Hans Kampfer will engage Little Beaver. In 30-minute tussles John Katan is slated to oppose Cliff Olson, Nick Campofreda will engage Jud Wallis, and Henry Piers will grimace at Scotty McDougall.

Grid Officials List Sessions On Rules

D. C. Body to Hold First Tonight to Interpret 1936 Regulations.

Members of the Washington District Football Officials Association will hold the first of a series of weekly meetings tonight at 8 o'clock at 1106 Vermont avenue, at which interpretation of the 1936 rules will be thoroughly discussed. Harry D. (Hobie) O'Meara, president of the association, will preside.

The officials are going to make a determined effort to acquaint all fans with the rules this season, and to give them a clearer understanding of rulings on the field. The latter will be accomplished by strict enforcement of the rule that referees must use the penalty signals described in the code book. Rules interpretation meetings will be held every Monday night throughout the season and all fans, coaches and players are invited to attend.

The association also intends to inaugurate a new free service this autumn of sending a member to meetings of local high school, college and athletic club squads to discuss rules with the players and, if possible, give them a better understanding of them.

Leto Promises Fast Battle With Furr Tonight

Invader Held 7-5 Favorite For Bout

District Fighter Believed Due Worse Licking Than Ross Gave.

By Bill McCormick.

In condition, mentally and physically, to fight at the drop of a top piece, Jimmy Leto arrived in Washington yesterday promising to "be sensational" in his ten-round fuss with District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr at Griffith Stadium tonight.

"Lookit him," insisted Weskit Al Weil, his manager, who accompanied the fifth-ranking welterweight to the Capital. "Lookit him, he's in the finest shape of his career —how about giving the Washington fans something sensational tomorrow night, Jimmy?"

Leto very quickly, and very modestly agreed to provide local lovers of larrup with a flash of sensational form that they will not forget for many a day. Leto seems particularly anxious to look even more impressive against Furr than did Champion Barney Ross, on whose trial he is camping.

Many are of the opinion that Jimmy will give Furr an even more conclusive going over than did Ross. They point out that Leto is perhaps jjujsjtj jajbjoujt as fast as Ross and hits a bit harder with either hand. They claim Leto is every bit the fighter that Ross is excepting that he isn't the boxer the champion is. This lack of boxing skill will not be noticed against Furr, they think, as the District welter title holder depends more on punch than ringmanship to score his victories.

Leto Is Favorite.

So certain are most observers of affairs fistic that Leto will win, that the 23-year-old Italian has been installed an early favorite at 7 to 5, with surprisingly little local money in sight.

A defeat at the hands of Leto would prove disastrous to Furr at this stage of the game. The local larruper has been beaten his last two times out—first by Champion Ross and next by southpaw Jack Portney, of Baltimore. It is no disgrace to lose to either of these two fighters, but a third beating in succession would cause quite a slump in the stock of Furr, Inc.

Of course, Furr has just as much to gain as he has to lose, but gaining it will be a pretty tough assignment. If Phillip flails his way to a decision over Leto, he probably will be in demand in New York, where Jimmy is highly regarded and Furr rates not t :'l.

Post Predictions.

Bouts are rated from A (the best) to G (the worst).

Main event—Jimmy Leto, Hartford, Conn., vs. Phil Furr, District welterweight champion, 10 rounds. Rated B. Leto probably will set off so fast and throw so many punches Furr won't know whether he's in the ring with a welterweight or six bantamweights. When you consider that Leto is a dangerous puncher with both hands, it is easy to see that Jimmy should win—perhaps even by a knockout.

Preliminaries—Reddy David, Washington, vs. Johnny Bellaus, Hartford, Conn., welterweights, 6 rounds. Rated E. Davis will be all right if he keeps his chin tucked out of the way, which he should do in this one.

Victor Vallee, New York, vs. Billy Bullock, Washington, lightweights, 6 rounds. Rated D. Vallee is perhaps the best fighter the local lightweight ever has encountered, but Billy can take care of himself in any kind of company and should win after a hard tussle.

Buddy Scott, Washington, vs. Rusty Baker, Baltimore, light heavyweights, 6 rounds. Rated D. Scott without too much trouble.

Shorty Ahearn vs. Joe Rimsey, colored heavyweights, 6 rounds. Rated E. Ahearn.

3 Sports Figures To Help With Show

Three of Washington's best known sports personalities volunteered last night to assist officials in putting over the Spring Valley Gold Cup Horse Show, which will be held here Saturday to raise funds for a program of sight conservation work among the city's poor.

They are Walter Johnson, still one of the Capital's most beloved figures despite the fact he has been in retirement for several years after a brilliant career in major league baseball; Arch McDonald, who does The Washington Post-People's Drug Stores baseball broadcasts, and Arthur Godfrey, McDonald's colleague at radio station WJSV.

Old Dominion Bow To Potomac Crews

Mary to win by three quarters of a boat-length.

Only three of the Potomac crew which beat Old Dominion for the second time this year were married, namely, George Birch, Dave Knox and Gude. George Herman, Potomac Club president, did not row, although a few weeks ago he set some kind of a record when he rowed in the Potomac crew despite his near 60 years of age.

The Potomac crew, rowing 27 strokes to the minute most of the way, led from start to finish. In the last 150 yards they picked up to 30 to the minute and won going away from the more ragged Old Dominion oarsmen.

The eight-oared events were the chief features of the annual Potomac Boat Club regatta. The indimitable Gude, incidentally, rowed in four races, retaining the singles sculls title he has held for 13 years and stroking the quadruple sculls crew to victory over Old Dominion. The latter also lost the four-oared gig race.

In a special canoe race, four feminine paddlers, Bette, Marjorie and Mrs. Marporie Burch and Mrs. Mary Birch defeated a boys' team by nearly a length.

ROWING RESULTS.

Four-oared gigs—Won by Potomac (No. 1, Jim Henderson; No. 2, Dave Knox; No. 3, John Dollins; stroke, Ernest Buff; coxswain, Charles Haig); second, Old Dominion (No. 1, J. Monroe; No. 2, M. Burrows; No. 3, O. Binelly; stroke, J. Whitestone; coxswain, H. Scott).

Quadruple sculls—Won by Potomac (No. 1, W. Stewart; No. 2, Ernie Millar; No. 3, J. Dollins; stroke, Granville Gude); second, Old Dominion (No. 1, R. Whitton, No. 2, B. Knight; No. 3, J. Whitestone; stroke, M. Bayles).

Single sculls—Won by Granville Gude (Potomac); second, Bob Duncan (Potomac); third, Jim Henderson (Potomac).

Eight-oared race—Won by Potomac (No. 1, William Stewart; No. 2, George Coiner; No. 3, George Birch; No. 4, Granville Gude; No. 5, Jim Henderson; No. 6, Dave Knox; No. 7, M. Bayles; stroke, Ernie Buff; coxswain, C. Haig); second, Old Dominion (No. 1, J. Monroe; No. 2, M. Burrow; No. 3, B. Knight; No. 4, L. Travis; No. 5, D. Bradley, No. 6, J. Whitestone; No. 7, M. Bayles; stroke, R. Whitton; coxswain, Jim Monroe).

CANOEING RESULTS

"Bouncers' race"—Won by James Burch (Potomac); second, James Burch, jr. (Potomac).

Ladies' race—Won by Bette Burch and Marjorie Burch (Potomac); second, Mrs. Mary Birch and Mrs. James Burch (Potomac).

Mixed tandem—Won by James Burch and Bette Burch (Potomac); second, Marjorie Burch and Audrey Bogley (Potomac).

Boys' Clubs to Play Football This Year

Football will be on the sports curricula of the Washington Boys Club again this year after an absence of four years, Director Charles Reynolds has announced, with teams to be organized in the lower weight brackets.

Candidates for the 100-pound eleven will have their initial workout of the season this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the field at Third and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Bunny Casassa, former varsity end and All-American lacrosse star at St. John's College, Annapolis, will coach the team.

With Paul Casassa directing the Georgetown Boys Club teams a friendly family fued is expected when the teams meet.

Beer Gridmen Practice.

The American Bee football team, 150-pound champions of the city last year, will practice at 6 p. m. tomorrow on the Rosedale field. A meeting will be held at 8:30 p. m. at 1116 Holbrook street northwest at the home of Thomas Farrell.

Cubs Split Pair With Dodgers; Don't Gain

French Blasted in 1st, 6-3; 14-Hit Attack Takes Second Tilt, 9-7.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, Sept. 13.—The Chicago Cubs blew a chance to gain on the National League leaders today by getting only a split with the Dodgers in a Sunday double-header.

The Dodgers got to Larry French for three runs in the opening inning of the first game to take a lead they never gave up in winning a 6-to-3 decision. A five-run blast in the sixth inning clinched a 9-to-7 victory for the Cubs in the nightcap.

With the league-leading Giants and second place Cardinals also splitting their twin bill, the even break for the Cubs left them five games off the pace and 1½ games back of second place.

Reds Win 1st, 2-1; Bees Take 2d, 6-1

Boston, Sept. 13 (AP).—The Boston Bees, with Danny MacFayden pitching six-hit ball, defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 6 to 1, today after being nosed out, 2 to 1, and limited to three hits by Gene Schott in the first game of a double-header before a crowd of 12,216.

Gene Moore, who got two of the three hits off Scott in the opener, batted in Weir, who scored the Bees' only run in the sixth inning.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Narragansett Park, Sept. 12.

Dear Al:

Remember when Firethorn burned up oodles and oodles of some of the best betting money in Maryland last fall? Well, the horse, still the property of Walter M. Jeffords and still trained by Preston Burch of Washington, D. C., is almost sure to start in the $25,000 Narragansett Special here on Wednesday. It's dollars to doughnuts that Firethorn will "be trying" in this race. It's a trifle too early for me to be picking him but the wise boys are getting ready to slip in some good greenbacks just before post time on this one. Firethorn is not a slouch. He defeated Granville in the Suburban Handicap last May 30 and he has been tending to his knitting in his workouts. Burch is a crafty trainer and I'm told that Firethorn was never better. The experts are counting Cavalcade out of the big money. The Sloane 1934 champion was a miserable last yesterday. It cannot be said that he was qualifying, either. Cavalcade was given a hard ride and failed to respond. If he goes to the post he will carry a 10-to-1 or a 15-to-1 price tag. Time Supply has been showing in-and-out form. If he has one of his good days, he will be either on top or near the top when Walter O'Hara's big pay-off time arrives. Rosemont is another of the veterans due consideration. Third in the Santa Anita Handicap, this fellow has started only once since. He has been good at coming back and may jolt the dope. Granville is expected to go postward and his recent victory over Discovery will earn him a host of backers. Despite the caliber of the opposition, the wise boys still like Firethorn.

BILL.

First race—Prairie Dog seems well suited by conditions in the day's opener. This is a pretty fair juvenile to be in the maiden class. Any price will be a good one. High Velocity has done enough to warrant consideration. Rafter to take care of the others.

Second race—Bull Market seems to have this purse at his mercy. Grigg knows how to ride this one and I expect a winning effort. Bay Hero is sharp now and should not be far out of it. Yenoor for the show end.

Third race—General A. nice second last week makes this veteran a keen contender if not the winner in this field. Personally, I shall string along. Merovech promises to be in the thick of the battle and is the one to beat. Fitkin will be dangerous if sent back.

Fourth race—Lady Highloss has demonstrated her fitness on many occasions and will carry her 115 pounds well in this company. Arcaro will do the riding and I can't foresee any mistakes. New Deal's recent new lease on life must be taken into consideration. Happy Knot is good and figures to be close.

Fifth race—Crows Flight is a standout in this company. This 2-year-old is going places and should take care of this company. Evening Tide is as good as that last and will be a factor. Devils Banner should make a money appearance.

Sixth race—Sandwrack has a remarkable record for getting home in front when the price is right. Little chance of this one being the favorite tomorrow, a fact that enhances his chances. Rock Point and Kingholm for the rest.

Seventh race—Scotch Soldier has been working his way toward a set of brackets. He is suited by this group and I'm going to play him as if he were already home. This Way, the probable favorite, is worthy of his support. Joan F. is a possible surprise at the weights.

Eighth race—The Triumvir seems capable of carrying 116 pounds to victory in this company. He will have the fit Blandishment to handle. Teddy Carl has won at this route and may be the sleeper.

Best Bet—Crows Flight.

Football Meeting.

A meeting of the National City Football League will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Atlas Sport Shop, 927 D street northwest, for 150-pound and 135-pound clubs. All players considering joining should attend.

CONCORD BEATS GARAGE.

The Concord A. C. defeated Washington Garage, 6-3, yesterday on the North Ellipse. Ken Blundon, of Roosevelt High, was the winning pitcher.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

Leto Promises Fast Battle With Furr Tonight

Invader Held 7-5 Favorite For Bout

District Fighter Believed Due Worse Licking Than Ross Gave.

By Bill McCormick.

In condition, mentally and physically, to fight at the drop of a top piece, Jimmy Leto arrived in Washington yesterday promising to "be sensational" in his ten-round fuss with District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr at Griffith Stadium tonight.

"Lookit him," insisted Weskit Al Weil, his manager, who accompanied the fifth-ranking welterweight to the Capital. "Lookit him, he's in the finest shape of his career—how about giving the Washington fans something sensational tomorrow night, Jimmy?"

Leto very quickly, and very modestly agreed to provide local lovers of larrup with a flash of sensational form that they will not forget for many a day. Leto seems particularly anxious to look even more impressive against Furr than did Champion Barney Ross, on whose trial he is camping.

Many are of the opinion that Jimmy will give Furr an even more conclusive going over than did Ross. They point out that Leto is perhaps jjujsjtj jajbjoujt as fast as Ross and hits a bit harder with either hand. They claim Leto is every bit the fighter that Ross is excepting that he isn't the boxer the champion is. This lack of boxing skill will not be noticed against Furr, they think, as the District welter title holder depends more on punch than ringmanship to score his victories.

Leto Is Favorite.

So certain are most observers of affairs fistic that Leto will win, that the 23-year-old Italian has been installed an early favorite at 7 to 5, with surprisingly little local money in sight.

A defeat at the hands of Leto would prove disastrous to Furr at this stage of the game. The local larruper has been beaten his last two times out—first by Champion Ross and next by southpaw Jack Portney, of Baltimore. It is no disgrace to losce to either of these two fighters, but a third beating in succession would cause quite a slump in the stock of Furr, Inc.

Of course, Furr has just as much to gain as he has to lose, but gaining it will be a pretty tough assignment. If Phillip flails his way to a decision over Leto, he probably will be in demand in New York, where Jimmy is highly regarded and Furr rates not :'!.

Post Predictions.

Bouts are rated from A (the best) to C (the worst).

Main event—Jimmy Leto, Hartford, Conn., vs. Phil Furr, District welterweight champion, 10 rounds. Rated B. Leto probably will get off so fast and throw so many punches in a round won't or whether he's in the ring with a welterweight or six bantamweights. When you consider that Leto is a dangerous puncher with both hands, it is easy to see that Jimmy should win—perhaps even by a knockout.

Preliminaries—Roddy Davis, Washington, vs. Johnny Bellasa, Hartford, Conn., welterweights, 6 rounds. Rated E. Davis will be all right if he keeps his chin tucked out of the way, which as should do in this one.

Victor Vallee, New York, vs. Billy Bullock, Washington, lightweights, 6 rounds. Rated D. Vallee is perhaps the best fighter the local lightweight ever has encountered, but Billy can take care of himself in any kind of company and should win after a hard tussle.

Buddy Scott, Washington, vs. Rusty Baird, Baltimore, light heavyweights, 6 rounds. Rated D. Scott without too much trouble.

Shorty Ahearn vs. Joe Rimsey, colored heavyweights, 6 rounds. Rated E. Ahearn.

3 Sports Figures To Help With Show

Three of Washington's best known sports personalities volunteered last night to assist officials in putting over the Spring Valley Gold Cup Horse Show, which will be held here Saturday to raise funds for a program of sight conservation work among the city's poor.

They are Walter Johnson, still one of the Capital's most beloved figures despite the fact he has been in retirement for several years after a brilliant career in major league baseball; Arch McDonald, who does The Washington Post-People's Drug Stores baseball broadcasts, and Arthur Godfrey, McDonald's colleague at radio station WJSV.

Old Dominion Bow To Potomac Crews

Mary to win by three quarters of a boat-length.

Only three of the Potomac crew which beat Old Dominion for the second time this year were married, namely, George Birch, Dave Knox and Gude. George Herman, Potomac Club president, did not row, although a few weeks ago he set some kind of a record when he rowed in the Potomac crew despite his near 60 years of age.

The Potomac crew, rowing 27 strokes to the minute most of the way, led from start to finish. In the last 150 yards they picked up to 30 to the minute and won going away from the more ragged Old Dominion oarsmen.

The eight-oared events were the chief features of the annual Potomac Boat Club regatta. The indimitable Gude, incidentally, rowed in four races, retaining the singles sculls title he has held for 13 years and stroking the quadruple sculls crew to victory over Old Dominion. The latter also lost the four-oared gig race.

In a special canoe race, four feminine paddlers, Bette, Marjorie and Mrs. Marporie Burch and Mrs. Mary Birch defeated a boys' team by nearly a length.

ROWING RESULTS

Four-oared gigs—Won by Potomac (No. 1, Jim Hendesson; No. 2, Dave Knox; No. 3, John Dollins; stroke, Ernest Buff; coxswain, Charles Haig); second, Old Dominion (No. 1, J. Monroe; No. 2, M. Burrow; No. 3, D. Binelly; stroke, Whitestone; coxswan, H. Scott).

Single sculls—Won by Granville Gude (Potomac); second, Bob Duncan (Potomac); third, Jim Henderson (Potomac).

Haig); second, Old Dominion (No. 1, J. Monroe; No. 2, M. Burrow; No. 3, B. Knight; No. 4, L. Travis; No. 5, D. Bradley, No. 6, J. Whitestone; No. 7, M. Bayles; stroke, R. Whitton; coxswain, Jim Monroe).

CANOEING RESULTS

"Bouncers' race"—Won by James Burch (Potomac); second, James Burch, jr. (Potomac).

Ladies' race—Won by Bette Burch and Marjorie Burch (Potomac); second, Mrs. Mary Birch and Mrs. James Burch (Potomac).

Mixed tandem—Won by James Burch and Bette Burch (Potomac); second, Marjorie Burch and Audrey Bosley (Potomac).

Boys' Clubs to Play Football This Year

Football will be on the sports curricula of the Washington Boys Club again this year after an absence of four years, Director Charles Reynolds has announced, with teams to be organized in the lower weight brackets.

Candidates for the 100-pound eleven will have their initial workout of the season this afternoon at 3 o'clock on the field at Third and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Bunny Casassa, former varsity end and All-American lacrosse star at St. John's College, Annapolis, will coach the team.

With Paul Casassa directing the Georgetown Boys Club teams a friendly family fued is expected when the teams meet.

Beer Gridmen Practice.

The American Bee football team, 150-pound champions of the city last year, will practice at 6 p. m. tomorrow on the Rosedale field. A meeting will be held at 8:30 p. m. at 1116 Holbrook street northwest at the home of Thomas Farrell.

Cubs Split Pair With Dodgers; Don't Gain

French Blasted in 1st, 6-3; 14-Hit Attack Takes Second Tilt, 9-7.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, Sept. 13.—The Chicago Cubs blew a chance to gain on the National League leaders today by getting only a split with the Dodgers in a Sunday double-header.

The Dodgers got to Larry French for three runs in the opening inning of the first game to take a lead they never gave up in winning a 6-to-3 decision. A five-run blast in the sixth inning clinched a 9-to-7 victory for the Cubs in the nightcap.

With the league-leading Giants and second place Cardinals also splitting their twin bill, the even break for the Cubs left them five games off the pace and 1½ games back of second place.

Ed Brandt limited the Cubs to eight hits in the opener, one of which was George Stainback's homer.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Narragansett Park, Sept. 12.

Dear Al:

Remember when Firethorn burned up oodles and oodles of some of the best betting money in Maryland last fall? Well, the horse, still the property of Walter M. Jeffords and still trained by Preston Burch of Washington, D. C., is almost sure to start in the $25,000 Narragansett Special here on Wednesday. It's dollars to doughnuts that Firethorn will "be trying" in this race. It's a trifle too early for me to be picking him but the wise boys are getting ready to slip in some good greenbacks just before post time on this one. Firethorn is not a slouch. He defeated Granville in the Suburban Handicap last May 30 and he has been tending to his knitting in his workouts. Burch is a crafty trainer and I'm told that Firethorn was never better. The experts are counting Cavalcade out of the big money. The Sloane 1934 champion was a miserable last yesterday. It cannot be said that he was qualifying, either. Cavalcade was given a hard ride and failed to respond. If he goes to the post he will carry a 10-to-1 or a 15-to-1 price tag. Time Supply has been showing in-and-out form. If he has one of his good days, he will be either on top or near the top when Walter O'Hara's big pay-off time arrives. Rosemont is another of the veterans due consideration. Third in the Santa Anita Handicap, this fellow has started only once since. He has been good at coming back and may jolt the dope. Granville is expected to go postward and his recent victory over Discovery will earn him a host of backers. Despite the caliber of the opposition, the wise boys still like Firethorn.

BILL.

First race—Prairie Dog seems well suited by conditions in the day's opener. This is a pretty fair juvenile to be in the maiden class. Any price will be a good one. High Velocity has done enough to warrant consideration. Rafter to take care of the others.

Second race—Bull Market seems to have this purse at his mercy. Grigg knows how to ride this one and I expect a winning effort. Bay Hero is sharp now and should not be far out of it. Yenoor for the show end.

Third race—General A. nice second last week makes this veteran a keen contender if not the winner in this field. Personally, I shall string along. Merovech promises to be in the thick of the battle and is the one to beat. Fitkin will be dangerous if sent back.

Fourth race—Lady Highloss has demonstrated her fitness on many occasions and will carry her 115 pounds well in this company. Arcaro will do the riding and I can't foresee any mistakes. New Deal's recent new lease on life must be taken into consideration. Happy Knot is good and figures to be close.

Fifth race—Crows Flight is a standout in this company. This 2-year-old is going places and should take care of this company. Evening Tide is as good as that last and will be a factor. Devils Banner should make a money appearance.

Sixth race—Sandwrack has a remarkable record for getting home in front when the price is right. Little chance of this one being the favorite tomorrow, a fact that enhances his chances. Rock Point and Kingholm for the rest.

Seventh race—Scotch Soldier has been working his way toward a set of brackets. He is suited by this group and I'm going to play him as if he were already home. This Way, the probable favorite, is worthy of his support. Joan F. is a possible surprise at the weights.

Eighth race—The Triumvir seems capable of carrying 116 pounds to victory in this company. He will have the fit Blandishment to handle. Teddy Carl has won at this route and may be the sleeper.

Best Bet—Crows Flight.

Football Meeting.

A meeting of the National City Football League will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Atlas Sport Shop, 927 D street northwest, for 150-pound and 135-pound clubs. All players considering joining should attend.

CONCORD BEATS GARAGE.

The Concord A. C. defeated Washington Garage, 6-3, yesterday on the North Ellipse. Ken Blundon, of Roosevelt High, was the winning pitcher.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

Strength Responses to a Take-out Double.

If your partner doubles for a takeout, with about two honor tricks and any biddable suit you should make a jump response—one more than is necessary. A jump response may be made in a major suit such as Q 10 x x x if the required two honor tricks are held.

A jump response of two no trump requires a double stopper (Q 10 x x or better) in the opponents' suit, and at least two honor tricks.

Although you must respond to a take-out double with a weak hand, on certain strong hands you may pass for penalties if you are certain that you will collect at least as much in penalties as the value of any game or part-score that you coul make.

Your partner's double of one no trump should be passed for penalties with about 1½ honor tricks, sometimes only one honor trick if there is some strength (queen or jack) in at least three suits.

When partner doubles a suit bid of one a penalty pass should emphatically be avoided. Nothing but extraordinary trump length justifies this pass.

In counting up expected defensive winners against opponents' suit bid, the doubler's partner ads his trump tricks and honor tricks in side suits to three expected honor tricks in his partner's hand, no more. Unless the total is at least seven tricks do not pass.

A Different Defense.

West, in the hand shown below, had a chance to distinguish himself on the defense, but he missed it.

South, dealer.

NORTH
♥ None

♣ K 10 8 5

WEST
♥ 9 5 2
♦ Q 10 8 7 2
♣ Q 6 4

EAST
♠ K Q 2
♥ K Q 10 7 4
♣ A J 9 3

SOUTH
♠ A J 10 6 4
♥ A J 8 6 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds	2 hearts
Double	Pass	4 clubs	Double
Pass	Pass	4 spades	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the nine of hearts. Dummy ruffed and played the ace and king of diamonds, declarer intending to discard a club. But East ruffed with the deuce and declarer overruffed, next leading a small heart for dummy to ruff. Another diamond and heart ruff followed, and then declarer entered his hand by ruffing a diamond with the spade ten. He cashed the trump ace, and then threw East on lead with the last spade. East returned the heart king but was thrown right back with the heart queen, and thus was forced to lead up to dummy's king of clubs at the thirteenth trick.

This hand is a good deal trickier than it appears at first glance. A shrewd declarer would have made his contract against any defense by taking the precaution to cash his ace of hearts at an early stage but, as actually played, if East had ruffed in with a trump honor at the time declarer was attempting to return to his hand by means of a diamond ruff (after dummy's three trumps had been used), the contract would have been defeated. If declarer overruffed, East would hold the master trump and would be able to give his partner a heart ruff, thus smothering declarer's heart ace and resulting in five tricks for the defenders. If declarer allowed East's trump honor to hold, discarding a club, East could, as before, lead the heart king through the declarer and this would defeat the contract one trick.

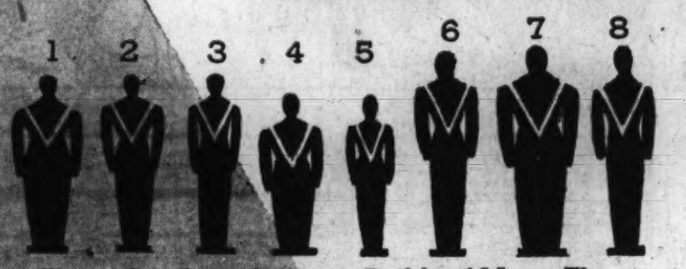
MEN! —EXCLUSIVE AT THE HECHT CO. AN ENTIRELY —NEW DEVELOPMENT IN MEN'S CLOTHING

The British Lounge

Worsted-Tex Men's SUITS

V-8 37.50



There Are Eight Different Builds of Men. The British Lounge V-8 Fits and Flatters Them All.

AN entirely new development in Men's Clothing—adapted from the British idea, and brought to America thru the foresight of the celebrated Worsted-Tex Co. The British Lounge V-8 is not just a temporary style but a permanent new trend in men's clothing. The Hecht Co. is proud to present exclusively the British Lounge V-8 to the men of Washington.

The V-8 signifies the unusual drape of the suits—broad at shoulders and tapered at the waist—to assure good fit, comfort and fine appearance for all eight builds of men. The British Lounge V-8 can be worn by either young or old, as evidenced by its acceptance at Yale and Princeton, as well as by prominent business executives.

You'll like particularly the wide shoulders, slightly lower waist line and slightly longer coat. These new developments help to add breadth of chest and "phantom" inches to the height of the wearer. We believe this is the first time that this type of suit has been successfully produced in ready-to-wear clothing at a reasonable price—with all the softness of tailoring and excellence of fabric demanded by its English design.

V-8 means good fit, comfort and fine appearance for all eight different builds of men.

The British Lounge V-8 reveals broad shoulders, a longer jacket and lowered waistline. These features seemingly add inches to your height.

The Tapered English Sleeve contributes to the illusion of breadth at the upper part of the body and slimness in the region of the hips.

The Extra Folds of Fabric at the chest are for extra comfort and to help the illusion of fuller chest development.

Showing the Tiny Tucks where the sleeve joins the shoulder. A feature that gives greater freedom to arm motion.

The Tapered Trousers, higher waist line and front pleats contribute to a more fashionable drape and added comfort. Moreover, the looseness of drape tends to prevent bagging at the knees.
